Arrest of Western student making waves on Internet

A startling video of a University of Western Ontario student being pummelled by a half-dozen police officers drew condemnation from some of the tens of thousands of people who watched it online Thursday as school officials defended what they called a necessary use of force.

VideoOnline
Watch the video at metronews.ca/canada

The 92-second video, posted on YouTube, shows the student being held down in a campus building hallway Wednesday. Campus police and officers from the London force are seen kneeing the student aggressively in the torso, repeatedly beating him on the back with batons and punching him hard.

At least one officer is heard yelling, "Stop resisting," and then, "Give us your arm."

Many in the online community reacted to the stark images with horror and anger, and the school's student council said some students were expressing concern that such a violent takedown occurred in their halls. But the school warned the video does not tell the whole story.

The student, identified by London police as 22-year-old Irnes Zeljkovic and described as about 6-foot-2 and more than 200 pounds, was "creating safety concerns" and had barricaded himself inside a room, said Elgin Austen, the head of campus police.

While the video is "disturbing" the incident needs to be kept in context, said university spokeswoman Gitta Kulczycki.

The main concern of police was protecting students and faculty, she said.

A lot of hot air? Falcon never went on a balloon ride

A six-year-old Colorado boy was found hiding in a cardboard box in his family's garage Thursday after being feared aboard a homemade helium balloon that hurtled 80 kilometres through the sky on live television.

The discovery marked a bizarre end to a saga that started when the giant silvery balloon floated away from the family's yard Thursday morning, sparking a frantic rescue operation that involved military helicopters and briefly halted some departures from Denver International Airport.

Then, more than two hours after the balloon gently touched down in a field with no sign of the boy, Sheriff Jim Alderden turned to reporters during a news conference, gave a thumbs up and said six-year-old Falcon Heene was "at the house."

"Apparently he's been there the whole time," he said.

Father Richard Heene said Falcon's brother saw him inside the compartment and that's why they thought he was aboard the balloon when it launched.

City housing 'Losing Ground'

United Way report shows disadvantaged neighbourhoods on the rise

Eradicating Poverty

HEATHER BUCHAN
for Metro Toronto

The growing gap between rich and poor in urban centres around the world is a global phenomenon. In Toronto, this can be attributed to a variety of factors, most significant of which is the rising cost of housing. Since 1990, overall apartment rents in Toronto have increased one-and-a-half times faster than inflation.

The United Way's 2007 report Losing Ground revealed the persistent growth in the number of disadvantaged neighbourhoods in Toronto; ones marked by high levels of poverty and insecure employment. Since the report was released, the global economy tanked, meaning the situation has only been compounded.

Gillian Mason, the United Way's senior vice-president of strategic initiatives and community partnerships, says the report found 13 neighbourhoods throughout the GTA with a concentration of poverty, which the United Way has deemed priority neighbourhoods. "The report very depressingly shows that families have been declining in these neighbourhoods since 1990," she says.

AARON HARRIS/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Daily Bread Food Bank director, research and communications Michael Oliphant says they are seeing an increase in clients as the recession's effects linger.

As a result, the United Way's 150 member agencies, including the Native Canadian Centre of Toronto, Neighbourhood Link and Skills for Change, are currently doubling their efforts to respond to significant demands in job seeking.

Aside from taking on initiatives to provide safe, healthy places for community members to raise their families, dispatching more youth outreach workers to priority neighbourhoods, expanding child care in these communities and increasing social programs for residents, many agencies like JVS are offering new free clinics on job seeking skills, financial literacy, stress management and peer support. "We're trying to do more with less," says Mason, adding, "We're approaching donors for in-kind gifts, not just cash."

Family Service Toronto — an agency that offers counselling, community development and public education programs — is seeing more and more cases of families where one or both parents have lost their jobs.

The city's food banks are also seeing an increase in clients. "We keep seeing an increase year over year of 20 per cent," says Michael Oliphant of The Daily Bread Food Bank.

"We actually have a food drive on right now. You can drop off food at any fire hall or Metro grocery store in the GTA."

The food will be sorted by Daily Bread and then delivered to the 160 member agencies around the city that run food banks and meal programs.

Police warn of increased stroller thefts in Toronto's west end

CRIME Police believe thieves may be targeting baby strollers after a recent spike in thefts, especially in Toronto's west end.

Since January, half a dozen strollers have been stolen in Toronto police 11 Division alone, which includes parts of Parkdale, High Park-Swansea and Runnymede Bloor West Village. Police are urging owners to secure or store strollers out of sight as they are taken from home porches in most cases.

Stand up, take action, end poverty

Eradicating Poverty

HEATHER BUCHAN
for Metro Toronto

MOVEMENT This weekend will see a global movement take place in the name of eradicating poverty. Last year, it made the Guinness Book of World Records as the largest single, co-ordinated movement of people, when 116 million people participated.

Called "Stand Up, Take Action, End Poverty Now," the event is co-ordinated by the United Nations Millenium Campaign and Global Call to Action Against Poverty with the aim of spreading awareness about the plight of the world's poor and calling on world leaders to accountability on the goals set forth in 2000 to eradicate poverty.

People in cities from New York to London to New Delhi to Seoul will be gathering to stand up and pledge their solidarity with the world's poorest people while at the same time demanding accountability from their governments to speed up efforts to eradicate poverty and hunger by 2015.

In Canada, gatherings have been organized in seven cities — Halifax, Montreal, Quebec City, Ottawa, Toronto, Windsor and Vancouver — through The Art of Living Foundation. The event in Toronto will take place at 11 a.m. Friday in the outdoor quadrant at Ryerson University. For more information visit www.standuptakeaction.org or www.artofliving.ca.

Deep cuts coming to programs?

ECONOMY Ontario taxpayers will find out next week just how hard the recession has hit the province's economy.

Finance Minister Dwight Duncan will deliver his fall economic update next Thursday, and unlike last fall, the government says this one will not be a mini-budget.

Instead, Duncan will reveal the size of the provincial deficit, last estimated to be $18 billion, and will detail the impact that an unprecedented drop in government revenues has had on the books.

The province's public accounts, released earlier this month, showed corporate tax revenues had fallen almost 50 per cent because of the global economic downturn.

Government sources say the tax revenues have not recovered yet, and will likely lag behind any new growth in the economy.

$18B

Ontario's provincial deficit, was last estimated to be $18 billion.

Duncan recently said the province may have to push back the 2015 date for balancing the books, but he won't outline a plan to eliminate the deficit in next week's update.

That will have to wait until the annual Ontario budget is introduced next spring. Both Duncan and Premier Dalton McGuinty have warned the province will have to make some difficult decisions soon.

Agent retells Khadr beating

Extradition fight continues

Abdullah Khadr described being beaten on the head for two hours following his arrest in Pakistan and said his ear bled for weeks from one of the blows, a Canadian intelligence officer testified Thursday.

The agent, who can be identified only as Christine, said Khadr also told her he was forced to stand for lengthy periods, only allowed to sleep a couple of hours at a time, and repeatedly interrogated by the FBI during his first 20 days in the custody of Pakistan's intelligence service, ISI.

"He used the words beating — the beating he described was blows to the head," Christine said.

"He was clearly upset by the treatment he had received."

The Canadian Intelligence Security Service agent testified Khadr also told her one Pakistani officer apologized for the mistreatment, saying it was "the American way of handling things."

> "He used the words beating — the beating he described was blows to the head."

The agent's conversation with Khadr occurred during a flight back to Canada from Islamabad in December 2005 after his release from 14 months in Pakistani custody.

Khadr, 28, is in Ontario Superior Court fighting extradition to the United States, where he is wanted for allegedly buying weapons for al-Qaida and plotting to kill Americans.

Police charge man with fraud

Former Junior A owner allegedly created fake tournament

A man police allege promised young hockey players a dream opportunity to play in a European hockey tournament under the watch of professional scouts is now facing a fraud charge.

About 100 players between the ages of 16 and 21 paid around $2,800 each for the opportunity and were allegedly told they might land spots on European hockey teams if scouts liked what they saw during a tournament.

But when they arrived in Colmar, France, in August there were no international teams, no scouts and no tournament.

Randy Gumbley, 42, the former owner of the Streetsville Derbys Junior A hockey team, was arrested Thursday and charged with one count of defrauding the public.

Gumbley, who police allege ran a business known as Ontario Central Scouting under the alias Frances Poirier, was to make a court appearance Thursday in Brampton, Ont.

Parents of the players were furious when their children returned home dejected.

Golow, who used inheritance money from Ryan's grandmother to pay for what they thought was a dream opportunity, was pleased to hear of the charges. She said her son is still playing hockey, but it's not quite the same.

Ontario OKs funds for new Vaughan hospital

$7M The Ontario government has pledged $7 million for a new hospital in Vaughan.

HEALTH CARE Ambitious plans for a new billion-dollar hospital in Vaughan are getting a major boost in the form of a $7 million provincial grant for work to begin on the design.

The grant for master planning being announced Friday is contingent on a joint administration agreement made between the Vaughan Health Campus of Care, the group advocating Vaughan's hospital, and York Central Hospital, located just eight kilometres away, to create a restructured board.

That agreement was made to save money and avoid the duplication of services and staff as well as the spectre of two hospitals competing for staff, money and medical services.

The new plan, which has the blessing of the province, will see the creation of two campuses of care, an expanded one in Richmond Hill and a brand new campus on a 60-acre parcel of land north of Major Mackenzie Drive, for which Vaughan taxpayers have already forked out $60 million.

Under the agreement hammered out at the urging of Vaughan MPP Greg Sorbara, representation on the new hospital board will be based on population, which means Vaughan-based members will constitute 60 per cent of the restructured board.

Province rolls out grants to finish apprenticeships

TRAINING Ontario workers are getting a new incentive to complete an apprenticeship.

The government will give grants up to $2,000 to apprentices who complete their training successfully. They'll also receive grants of up to $1,500 per term to help with school costs.

Employers who successfully train apprentices will get up to $1,000.

Premier Dalton McGuinty says the move is meant to ensure that more workers finish apprenticeships.

The government already provides a tax credit of up to $10,000 over four years for workers who train as apprentices.

Dogs may have day in the sun this winter

PETS People should be allowed to walk their dogs on the city's swimming beaches during the winter months, a city council committee says.

Under a compromise, dog owners could stroll the beach with their leashed dogs from Nov. 1 to March 31, except in the eastern waterfront, where dogs could run off-leash in certain areas of Balmy, Kew and Woodbine beaches.

The recommendation, adopted Thursday by the parks and environment committee, goes to city council at the end of the month for a final decision.

Since February, when a dog ban on beaches used for swimming was imposed by council for environmental reasons, Beach residents have pushed for an off-leash winter exemption, saying that was informally allowed in previous years.

"I think it's a fair and reasonable compromise, I'm glad a meeting of the minds came together and I think everyone can be happy," said Chris Yaccato of the Toronto Beaches Dog Association.

Death, taxes separated: Prepaid funerals HST-free

FEES Death and taxes may be the only certainties in this world, as the saying goes, but Ontario and British Columbia are giving a break of sorts to people who pre-pay for funeral services before the harmonized sales tax kicks in.

John Wilkinson

Ontario's 13 per cent HST, once it takes effect next July, will be placed on many items currently only subject to the eight per cent provincial sales tax, including heating oil, haircuts, and funerals.

Anyone in either province who pays for funeral services, including a burial plot, before July 1, 2010, will not have to pay the HST, Ontario's revenue minister said Thursday.

"A pre-paid funeral is probably the most stark example of how you may pay for something today and not take delivery of that service for maybe decades," John Wilkinson said.

"The funeral services businesses had been talking with our government about a transition rule that's very clear."

Ontario unveiled transitional rules Thursday to clarify for businesses exactly which tax would apply to which goods and services when the customer pays before July 1, 2010.

The rules will be the same in B.C., which is planning to bring in a 12 per cent HST in July, said Wilkinson. They are based on the experiences of other provinces that harmonized sales taxes with the goods and services tax

Cops appeal to schools in search for teenager

MISSING Toronto police have renewed an appeal to high school students to help them find missing teenager Mariam Makhniashvili.

The 17-year-old girl has not been seen since arriving at her school, Forest Hill Collegiate, on Sept. 14 with her younger brother.

Det.-Sgt. Dan Nealon asked students at nearby Northern Secondary school to keep Mariam in their "hearts and minds."

He reminded the students that although she didn't attend that school she is "part of the larger community."

Nealon, who will issue the same plea at another nearby school Friday, said what police need is "some light to point us in some direction."

The only solid clue to date is the discovery of Mariam's backpack and some school books in a parking lot on Oct. 8.

Nealon said the parking lot, nestled among apartment buildings, is a hang-out spot for some teens and is used as a shortcut. He implored them to try to recall anything suspicious.

Mammoliti rhymes off his ideas

Guns for bylaw officers, sin tax for strip joints, corporate-sponsored subway in his plan

If he were elected mayor of Toronto, Giorgio Mammoliti would consider building the McDonald's Subway Line.

He would give guns to city bylaw officers.

He would hold down taxes by building a casino, and taxing red light districts.

And though he started his career as a union leader, he would get tough on the city's unions.

Mammoliti — currently councillor for Ward 7, York South-Weston — acknowledges some things he wants to do aren't within the city's powers.

And he says he'll only run for mayor if he can raise enough money for a campaign.

That's a big if, given the cost of running a city-wide campaign against tough opposition.

Possible candidates include former mayoral candidate John Tory, deputy premier George Smitherman, former Winnipeg mayor Glen Murray and fellow councillors Adam Giambrone, Shelley Carroll and Michael Thompson.

But Mammoliti says he wants to try out some new ideas, among them:

- Busting crime, including crackdowns on illegal activity in body rubs and strip joints. One solution? Creating a red light district or districts — he won't say where — to keep body rubs and prostitution out of residential neighbourhoods, and hitting them with a heavy "sin tax."
- Giving city bylaw officers guns, and seeking new powers for them to enter buildings to look for illegal activity.
- Establishing a casino and a lottery to offset the need for tax increases.
- Inviting private corporations to sponsor new subway lines, although he wouldn't want privately operated subways.
- Giving police a bigger role in writing city bylaws. Traditionally politicians pass laws and police enforce them, but Mammoliti wants law enforcement officers to take a bigger role in writing city bylaws.

TTC chair Adam Giambrone, left, is seen this summer with Mayor David Miller. Giambrone, along with Coun. Giorgio Mammoliti, is mulling a run for mayor of Toronto.

Giambrone runs?

- He's chair of the TTC and now city councillor Adam Giambrone is mulling a higher calling: mayor of Toronto.

When Mayor David Miller made his surprise announcement a few weeks ago that he wouldn't be seeking re-election next year, Giambrone, a Miller loyalist, was coy when asked by reporters if he had aspirations to run. Giambrone refused to say, one way or the other.

Now he says he's seriously considering it.

He's been out recently getting input from a wide range of people across the city, he says.

"There are people representing different movements, different cultural backgrounds ... that's what I'm in the process of doing. You get feedback, and a lot of it has been very positive," says Giambrone.

The key areas he'd tackle? — continuing to shepherd David Miller's Transit City initiative, waste diversion, making "serious choices" around the city's operating budget, and making city hall more accessible to the general public.

Aurora lets residents change unlucky addresses

CULTURE In a nod to cultural superstition, Aurora is now allowing residents to eliminate the unlucky number 4 — or any other unwanted number — from their street address.

"Over the last few years, we've had a number of requests to change addresses with the number four in them," said Marco Ramunno, Aurora's director of planning and development services. "It has a bad luck connotation for people from east Asia. It's no different than the old number 13."

In Asian cultures, the number 4 sounds like the word "death" when spoken, so is considered unlucky. As a result, some numbered products manufactured in Asian, such as certain cell phones, PDA's and cameras, do not have the number 4 in their series names.

Aurora council voted Tuesday to allow residents to make a request to change their street numbers as long as there is a wide enough numbering gap.

The rural street number one resident in Vaughan asked to have changed, which is the mark of the Antichrist or Beast in modern pop culture. The request was granted.

On streets where numbers progress by intervals of four or more — for example, 2, 6, 10, 14, 18 — the street number "14" can be substituted with the numbers 12 or 16. In Cantonese culture, 14 is considered one of the unluckiest of numbers.

"If there's an interval of at least four, then an opportunity to change the address exists," Ramunno said.

If the street numbers progress by two in even and odd numbers on different sides of the street — 2, 4, 6, 8 — then the numbers cannot be changed.

"Unfortunately, there would be no room to make such changes," said Ramunno, who himself has the number 4 in his street address.

Ramunno said the number 13, considered unlucky in Western cultures, was eliminated many years ago in Aurora's residential street numbering system.

Agencies likened to monsters

Provincial bodies can 'rise up and wreak untold havoc,' ombudsman warns

The Ontario government's inability to oversee its own agencies has created a monster that's wreaked havoc on its creators — a systemic failure that must be immediately addressed, the province's ombudsman said Thursday.

Agencies, boards and commissions, commonly referred to as ABCs, may seem "tame and dull," Andre Marin said during a lunchtime speech at the Economic Club of Canada.

"But they begin life just as Frankenstein's monster did, as a volatile combination of parts that don't always work together, and sometimes if governments aren't careful their creations can rise up and wreak untold havoc."

In the wake of scandals at eHealth Ontario and the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corp., the government must take a more holistic, proactive approach and learn from mistakes to avoid further costs to taxpayers and erosion of services, Marin said.

RICK MADONIK/TORONTO STAR

Ontario Ombudsman Andre Marin speaks on "The ABCs of rebuilding public trust: Restoring accountability to Ontario's agencies" at the Economic Club of Canada Thursday.

"When malformed or mutated agencies, boards and commissions start running our governments, destroying the quality of service and sending costs spiralling, we are all in trouble," he said.

"The OLG's fall from grace is a cautionary tale that should be mandatory reading for all."

The Liberal government has ordered a sweeping review to root out spending abuses at government agencies following revelations of unacceptable expenses at the OLG. It's also dealing with a scathing report into the months-long scandal at eHealth, an agency set up to bring health records online that sent millions of dollars out the door in untendered contracts.

Marin said the government deserves credit for trying to deal with the problems, but suggests they should have been setting safeguards before the scandals.

"The risk right now is that we fall into a finger-in-the-dyke approach. We rush from one scandal to the next," he said.

Hunger striker could live indefinitely, says doctor

SUSPECT Mohammad Mahjoub may be on a prolonged hunger strike, but he is not technically starving himself.

While his weight will plummet and muscles waste, by taking in juices and vitamin B supplements, the detained terror suspect could live indefinitely, just like millions of malnourished people around the world, says Dr. Khursheed Jeejeebhoy, a University of Toronto gastroenterologist.

"You waste to the point where the calorie intake and the (calorie) requirements sort of balance," Jeejeebhoy says. Unlike Irish Republican Army hunger striker Bobby Sands — who refused all sustenance but water during his 1981 protest and died in 66 days — Mahjoub allows himself the juice and vitamins.

Mahjoub has been in and out of federal custody since 2000, when he was arrested on suspicions of ties to al-Qaida. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Pamphlet irks Toronto couple

TORIES For Myrna Levy, it was bad enough that the political propaganda that arrived at her Toronto home was sent by a Conservative MP in Alberta.

But what really got her steamed were the grammatical errors that dotted the copy taking aim at Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff.

The pointed pamphlet from Conservative MP Laurie Hawn in Edmonton picks up on the theme of his party's television ads that Ignatieff is "just visiting."

"Michael Ignatieff has spent more of his life outside Canada than living in it," reads the flyer.

Toronto couple Myrna and Ed Levy aren't alone in finding partisan pamphlets in their mailbox. Canadians are getting flooded with a new wave of political mailings. One estimate pegs it at 13 million in the last few weeks alone — a product of the election scare last month when parties ramped up their mailings in a bid to sway voters.

According to one Parliament Hill source, the Commons printing services office had a record backlog of more than 3,000 orders from all parties several weeks ago. With an average of 4,300 pieces per order, that represents almost 13 million pieces of political mail ready to swamp mailboxes across the country.

The volume — and the tone of some of the mailing — has prompted a renewed call for the House of Commons to curb MP's penchant for printing, which is costing taxpayers more than $9 million a year.

Parliamentary policies allow MPs to mail out materials to constituents four times a year. However, MPs are also allowed to send mailings into other ridings, including ones held by rival parties, as long as the number of recipients doesn't exceed 10 per cent of the households in the MP's own riding. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Grammar errors

- The pamphlet reads, "Why would anyone feel the need to call themselves a samurai warrior," mixing singular and plural.
- Another sentence reads, "It sounds like more like Michael Ignatieff, once again is just visiting."

Distracted driver grace period doesn't preclude fines: Police

LAW The grace period around Ontario's new distracted-driving law will save the majority of cellphone clutching motorists from a ticket before Feb. 1, but it doesn't guarantee egregious cases will walk away scot-free in the meantime.

In rare cases, where a driver's bad attitude or behaviour warrant a stern check, the motorist can be summoned to appear before a justice of the peace, who has the authority to level stiff fines, York Region Police said yesterday.

While most drivers caught using hand-held phones, texting or fiddling with their GPS or iPod after the new law becomes official Oct. 26, won't get a ticket until Feb. 1, the message is out on force that drivers should immediately shift their focus to the road.

As York Region Police launched an awareness campaign Thursday in Richmond Hill, it was clear that many motorists either haven't got the message or haven't yet made the switch to hands-free devices.

Most of the drivers pulled over for a chat by officers on Yonge Street, near Highway 407, took a short talking-to in stride, well aware that they wouldn't be getting a ticket.

Under the new law the maximum fine will be $500 but most tickets are expected to be about $100. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Cheques prompt complaints

Liberals ask ethics czar to look into Tories' promotional placards

The Liberals are complaining to the federal ethics commissioner over government use of taxpayer cheques bearing the Conservative party logo or Tory MPs' signatures.

Ethics Commissioner Mary Dawson is being asked to investigate 48 separate examples of promotional government cheques that Tory MPs used to tout stimulus spending for partisan gain.

The Liberals claim to have dug up 181 examples of partisan cheque presentations going back to 2007 on which Conservative emblems overshadow the Government of Canada logo.

To underscore their point, the Liberals held a news conference Thursday beneath a backdrop image of Prime Minister Stephen Harper made from a collage of photographs of the cheque presentations.

The bulk of those placards bear the MP's name and signature. The Liberals say five cheques presented by Tory MPs Gerald Keddy and Colin Mayes are adorned with the Tory logo.

The Liberals and other critics say it's a breach of government rules under the Federal Identity Program. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa refuses to expand information, privacy laws

TORIES The Harper government has quietly nixed recommendations to expand and modernize Canada's access-to-information and privacy laws.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson's rejection of reforms to the 26-year-old laws sparked accusations Thursday that the Tories have reneged on campaign promises to bring openness and transparency to the federal government.

"The access system now does not work," said Michel Drapeau, a lawyer and a leading expert on accessing government documents.

"They appear to like it this way."

Nicholson's rejection was also greeted with disappointment by privacy experts, who warned that Canada's outdated Privacy Act does not cover modern technologies, such as surveillance cameras and DNA samples collected from suspects.

Nor does it give the privacy commissioner any recourse to the courts when the government inappropriately discloses personal information, no matter how serious the breach.

A Commons committee had recommended, among other things, that the information commissioner be given more power to force the government to disclose information in a timely manner. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Olympic heavy hitters

Medals for 2010 Winter Games weigh half a kilogram

Athletes heading for the 2010 Winter Games had better start strengthening their neck muscles.

The gold, silver and bronze medals unveiled Thursday are among the heaviest in Olympic Games history.

They weigh about half a kilogram.

The medals are based on two artworks of an orca whale and raven by B.C.-born artist Corrine Hunt.

None of the 615 Olympic and 399 Paralympic medals will be alike.

The metals are undulating, rather than flat. The Olympic medals are circular. The Paralympic medals are more square.

"Medals are memories, they are memories of the dedication, the commitment, and the sacrifice that every one of these athletes gave," said Daniel Wesley, a five-time Canadian Paralympian and 12-time medallist.

"These medals … set a new high standard, a new high-water mark for all the other Olympics to come to see if they can match it."

International Olympic Committee president Jacques Rogge said: "These medals are a beautiful and fitting tribute to the athletes who will shine and be forever remembered as the heroes and heroines of the Vancouver 2010 Olympic Winter Games."

Tough times in Alberta: Premier takes a pay cut

POLITICS Alberta Premier Ed Stelmach and his cabinet are taking a pay cut.

Stelmach is cutting his premier's allowance by 15 per cent, or just more than $12,000 a year, effective immediately.

Ministers are having their cabinet wages cut by 10 per cent, which amounts to almost $6,400 annually.

"I met with cabinet … and I asked them to join me in terms of the salary reductions … and they all agreed," Stelmach said.

Stelmach's chief of staff, and the head of the provincial civil service, are also taking a 10 per cent cut.

The province is facing a $7-billion deficit this year.

Meanwhile, Stelmach's Progressive Conservative government is freezing the wages of about 6,500 senior civil servants for the next two years.

Stelmach also suggested that teachers, doctors, nurses and other public sector workers voluntarily forego increases for the next 24 months.

When asked Thursday whether the wage freeze will be imposed or negotiated, Stelmach replied that he wants an open approach.

"But at the end of the day I'm going to be very firm," he said.

The number of people affected hasn't been disclosed but Atlantic Canada's main phone company says its 16 customer call centres range in size from four employees to 400 and have 1,400 jobs in total.

Two hundred unionized employees hit by the shutdown of the smaller centres will be offered jobs at five remaining centres.

The five will be in Charlottetown, Halifax, Moncton and Saint John in New Brunswick and Mount Pearl in Newfoundland.

Spycatchers rapped

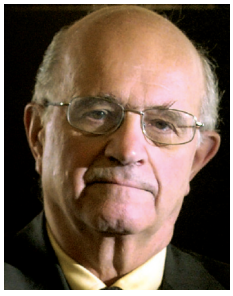
CSIS bosses crack down on careless labelling of suspects

Be careful how you label people — that's the order from Canada's spy agency to its officers.

The Canadian Security Intelligence Service has explicitly told its officers to describe people in "a fair and precise manner" when passing information to other countries — especially ones with poor human-rights records.

The formal directive, revealed Thursday, came last November from the deputy director of operations at the Canadian Security Intelligence Service.

That was after a federal inquiry into the torture of three Canadians lambasted CSIS for carelessly labelling suspects.



Frank Iacobucci

In his report released one year ago next week, former Supreme Court justice Frank Iacobucci found Canadian officials contributed to the brutalization of Ahmad El Maati, Abdullah Almalki and Muayyed Nureddin by sharing information — including unfounded accounts of extremist links — with foreign intelligence and police agencies.

Iacobucci concluded all three were tortured behind bars in Syria and, in the case of El Maati, in Egypt as well.

All deny any involvement in terrorism.

One CSIS witness told the inquiry that descriptions were sometimes used by the intelligence service to elicit information from a foreign agency.

"He said the service will characterize an individual, at least in part, to prompt a response from the receiving agency that will confirm or deny the assessment that the characterization reflects," Iacobucci's October 2008 report says.

"In my view, this is a a very dangerous practice."
Frank Iacobucci

"In my view this is a very dangerous practice, one that puts the person labelled in this manner at risk."

Almalki, El Maati and Nureddin are suing federal agencies in Ontario Superior Court over alleged complicity in their detention and mistreatment abroad.

NDP wants torture probe

ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS
NDP MP Jack Harris, in Ottawa Thursday, holds up a copy of an affidavit filed by diplomat Richard Colvin who warned of the possibility of torture.

PRISONERS The NDP says there should be a public inquiry into Canada's policy of handing over prisoners to Afghan jails.

The Conservative government is continuing to stonewall the issue, the New Democrats say.

A public hearing by the Military Police Complaints Commission was shut down Wednesday for at least six months to let lawyers argue appeals over the scope of the agency's power.

Defence Minister Peter MacKay has repeatedly said the commission has a mandate limited to what military police knew — or should have known — about the possible torture of Taliban prisoners.

NDP defence critic Jack Harris says a formal inquiry may be the only way to go.

"The truth needs to be brought out and if the government is doing its best and succeeds in preventing the truth from coming out … then we will obviously want to have a full public inquiry," Harris said at a news conference Thursday.

Diplomat Richard Colvin, who is now an intelligence officer at the Canadian embassy in Washington, wrote reports in May and June 2006 that pointed to the possibility that prisoners handed over to the Afghans were being abused.

Quebec man loses trial bid

CRIME The Supreme Court of Canada is refusing to hear an appeal launched by a Quebec man who was fighting to be tried as a minor.

Brandon Pardi is charged with hitting and killing three-year-old Bianca Leduc in 2007.

Pardi turned 18 on the same day he allegedly committed the offence.

Another man, then 17, is also facing similar charges but is being tried in front of a youth court judge.

Leduc was in a yard putting up Halloween decorations with her babysitter when she was struck by a car on Oct. 31, 2007.

With the Supreme Court decision, two previous Quebec judgments stand and Pardi will have to be tried as an adult.

Pardi, now 19, faces up to life in prison if convicted.

Tobacco firm destroyed studies: Report

Released copies examined

Imperial Tobacco Canada destroyed decades' worth of scientific research that demonstrated the devastating effects of smoking, a new medical journal article alleges.

The University of Waterloo researchers said they examined 60 scientific studies that had been conducted between 1967 and 1984, and published their findings in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

They said one of the studies showed tobacco company researchers exposing hamsters to cigarette smoke, and concluding that they developed cancerous lesions as a result. They also said the studies showed how second-hand smoke was worse than first-hand smoke.

The researchers said the documents were destroyed in Canada in 1992 at the request of Imperial's British head office, but copies remained stored at British American Tobacco headquarters in the U.K.

Researchers say they were able to inspect the reports after seven million pages of documents from British American Tobacco and its subsidiaries — including Imperial Tobacco — were released by a U.S. court.

Ontario recently filed a $50 billion lawsuit against a dozen Canadian firms and their parent companies over smoking-related health costs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Documents

- Imperial Tobacco had no immediate comment. In the past, a spokesman responding to a 1998 report about destroyed documents, said only copies were trashed and the originals were in England.

Court dumps rape verdict

A man convicted for a pair of sexual assaults in London, Ont., must be re-tried, the Supreme Court of Canada has ruled.

Thursday's 7-0 ruling set aside the convictions against Gregory Ernest Last on the basis that the trial judge erred by refusing to split the cases into separate trials.

Last was convicted in March 2005 on a number of charges in the rapes of two women in 2003. He was sentenced to 22½ years in prison.

Justice Marie Deschamps, writing for the court, said the trial judge failed to weigh the factors properly in rejecting Last's bid for separate trials.

One complainant said she was raped at gunpoint, then choked into unconsciousness.

"So TV Stations already get $100 million for local programming? And now they want us to pay even more?"

The CRTC recently created the "Local Programming Improvement Fund," ensuring over $100 million annually to help fund local TV stations. And now, just months later, Canada's TV networks want the CRTC to impose an additional tax of up to $10/month on us all, resulting in hundreds of millions of additional dollars that will go directly into their pockets, no questions asked. Enough is enough.

Come on Canada. Make your voice heard.

U.S. House votes to regulate derivatives

A U.S. House of Representatives' panel voted Thursday to regulate for the first time privately traded derivatives, the kind of exotic financial instruments that helped bring down Lehman Brothers and nearly toppled American International Group. The 43-26 vote by the House Financial Services Committee was a first major step for President Barack Obama's plans to overhaul federal regulations governing the nation's financial institutions.

Obama criticized in New Orleans

STORM AID Insisting he's "just getting started," U.S. President Barack Obama defended his administration Thursday in New Orleans against complaints from some residents of the hurricane-ravaged Gulf Coast that federal help in recovering from the 2005 disasters hasn't improved much since he took office. As a candidate, Obama criticized former president George W. Bush's response to Hurricane Katrina, when the government showed up late and unprepared. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Relatives of a police officer killed by gunmen react Thursday in Lahore, Pakistan.

At least 19 killed in three attacks

PAKISTAN Islamist militants launched co-ordinated assaults on three police compounds in Pakistan's second largest city Thursday, the latest in a wave of attacks by insurgents bringing the war to the country's heartland ahead of an expected offensive against their Afghan border sanctuary. Thursday's assaults in Lahore added to a sense of crisis in this nuclear-armed country, now shaken by five major attacks by the Islamic extremists in the last 10 days that have killed more than 150 people — including a 22-hour siege of army headquarters over the weekend. At least 19 people were killed in the Lahore attacks, most of them security officers, along with nine heavily armed attackers.

"We are here to lay down our lives for Islam. Jihad will continue," two attackers shouted before blowing themselves up, according to one police officer.

Smoking ban is saving lives

A major U.S. report confirms what health officials long have believed: Bans on smoking in restaurants, bars and other gathering spots reduce the risk of heart attacks among nonsmokers.

"If you have heart disease, you really need to stay away from secondhand smoke. It's an immediate threat to your life," declared Dr. Neal Benowitz of the University of California, San Francisco, who co-wrote Thursday's report from the prestigious Institute of Medicine.

Among the report's conclusions: While heavier exposure to secondhand smoke is worse, there is no safe level. It also cited "compelling" if circumstantial evidence that even less than an hour's exposure might be enough to push someone already at risk of a heart attack over the edge. That is because within minutes, the smoke's pollution-like small particles and other substances can start constricting blood vessels and increasing blood's propensity to clot — key heart attack factors. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

2nd hand danger

- More than 126 million non-smokers in the U.S. are regularly exposed to tobacco smoke. The U.S. surgeon general in 2006 cited "overwhelming scientific evidence" that tens of thousands die each year as a result from heart disease, lung cancer and other illnesses.

China seeking closer relations with Iran

Developments throwing wrench into U.S. plans

Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao said Thursday that China intends to strengthen its co-operation with Iran, an indication Beijing would oppose growing calls in the West for additional sanctions against the Islamic regime for its nuclear program.

Earlier this month, Tehran revealed that it was operating a previously undisclosed uranium enrichment facility near the holy city of Qom, deepening suspicions in Europe and the U.S. that Tehran seeks atomic weapons.

But U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton was rebuffed in Moscow this week when she sought support for a united warning to Iran of the consequences of refusing to prove that its nuclear program is peaceful.

Washington had hoped that Moscow was warming to the idea of tougher sanctions after Russian President Dmitry Medvedev said they were sometimes inevitable. But ever since, the Russians have been backtracking from that remark, saying threats of such measures are unhelpful in negotiations with Iran. Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin said in Beijing on Wednesday that talking about sanctions was "premature."

Wen's remarks Thursday appeared to suggest that Beijing is also unlikely to accept any new UN sanctions resolution. China and Russia are both veto-wielding members of the UN Security Council and have long defended Tehran by watering down resolutions.

Iran has denied its uranium enrichment is for weapons making and has agreed to have UN inspectors visit the newly disclosed facility.

U.S. legislation

Uncovered murals in Syria give insight into Crusades

Soldiers cling to positives in Afghanistan

Soldiers don't often wear their hearts on their sleeves, but everyone needs an outlet. When it comes to how Canada's troops feel about their Afghan mission, a graffiti-festooned bathroom stall can offer some interesting insight.

One scribble, headed "Things You've Learned on This Tour," offers Gen. Douglas MacArthur's 1961 advice to then president John F. Kennedy (especially familiar to fans of the 1987 film The Princess Bride): "Never get involved in a land war in Asia."

Indeed, in the face of a war that's raged for nearly a decade and a resilient insurgency, the writing is on the wall in more ways than one. The Taliban's reach is extending well beyond its southern stronghold, and despite a massive U.S. troop surge, insurgent attacks are more brazen than ever — a fact illustrated by last week's bloody siege of a U.S. outpost near the Afghan-Pakistan frontier.

131 Some 131 Canadian soldiers have died as part of the mission since it began in 2002.

But many Canadian troops — speaking, as they so often insist, on condition of anonymity — say what matters most are the people they fight with.

"It's like movies you see from the Vietnam war — you get a platoon and they say they're not there fighting for the cause, they're fighting for their friends," offered one 15-year veteran.

"There's a little bit of that. You're going to fight harder because it's someone you know and you care about that's beside you."

Around them, however, the signs of a troubled NATO mission are everywhere. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Italy, NATO deny reports of Taliban bribes

AFGHANISTAN Italy and NATO on Thursday denied a newspaper report that Italian intelligence secretly paid the Taliban thousands of dollars to keep the peace in an Afghan area under Italian control.

Premier Silvio Berlusconi's office called the report in the Times of London "completely groundless." The Italian defence minister denounced it as "rubbish" and said he wanted to sue the paper.

The Times reported that Italy had paid "tens of thousands of dollars" to Taliban commanders in the Surobi district, east of the capital, Kabul. The newspaper cited Western military officials, including high-ranking officers at NATO, speaking on condition of anonymity. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Abdullah awaits UN recount of Afghan votes

ELECTION President Hamid Karzai's top challenger in Afghanistan's intensely contested presidential election said Thursday he had faith that a UN-backed commission working to root out fraudulent votes would announce a fair decision within days.

Former Foreign Minister Abdullah Abdullah stopped short of saying he would accept its results, and expressed concern over the board's methodology. But "we have to have faith in something," he said.

The Electoral Complaints Commission, which will determine how many fraudulent votes to toss out, could release findings as early as Saturday. The nation's main electoral body would then announce whether Abdullah will face Karzai in a runoff, which would be held within two weeks. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Car Insurance Roadblock

Consumers concerned insurers don't want drivers with tickets or accidents

Worried Your Spotted Driving Record Means You've Got Nowhere To Turn For Car Insurance?

Don't be. While it's true that, all things being equal, your tickets and accidents make you a more expensive risk to insure than a similar car and driver with a clean driving record, that doesn't mean you should have trouble finding insurance – assuming you know where to look. Different insurance companies target different types of business and this is reflected in things like their claims service, marketing efforts, discounts, and most importantly for you, their rates.

Can Some Insurance Companies Simply Refuse to Insure Some Drivers?

No. Since insurance companies have to file their rules and rates with the Financial Services Commission of Ontario (FSCO) they can only refuse drivers if they fall outside of the rules sent to FSCO. But what they can do is market themselves and set their rates such that they are more competitive for consumers they wish to attract (and, yes, less competitive for consumers they don't wish to attract). The result is that rates charged by different insurance companies to insure the same driver, with the same car, for the same coverage, can vary by hundreds and even thousands of dollars. Take a look at the table below.

Am I Doomed To Pay A Bundle?

No. Sadly, this is a mistake many drivers make and it can be a costly one, especially if they don't bother to shop around for the lowest rate available. The key to finding the best rate, especially if you have tickets or accidents on your driving record, is to figure out which insurance company of the more than 30 in Ontario has the best rate for your particular situation. And with rates varying so wildly across companies, chances are you are not with the company that has the lowest rate for your profile right now.

This is where InsuranceHotline.com can help, by offering an independent, unbiased rate comparison from over 30 top insurance companies to find you the lowest rate for your profile and then connecting you with a licensed broker or agent who can provide the policy. Obama deserves prize, says Carter

Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter said Thursday that President Barack Obama deserves his Nobel Peace Prize based on his achievements and the promise of an aggressive agenda that he's still working to fulfil.

SUE OGROCKI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter fully endorses President Barack Obama's winning of the 2009 Nobel Peace Prize.

"Obama deserves it as much as anyone who's ever gotten it for his achievement already," Carter, who won the prize himself in 2002, said in an interview.

"He's transformed the image of America around the world, he's stopped the practice of torture, he's called for and taken leadership in doing away with nuclear weapons."

But Carter said Obama's award also reflects the aggressive agenda which the 44th U.S. president still has more than three years to fulfil, such as his attempts to jump-start the Mideast peace process and his work in resolving long-standing conflicts with Iran and others. "If you talk to almost any person in a foreign country, they would tell you their own particular hopes and dreams and aspirations for the future have been enhanced by the vision that Obama has put forward," he said.

Bosnia, Lebanon grab seats on UN's most powerful body

Bosnia and Lebanon won seats Thursday on the Security Council and will be in the rare position of being subject to scrutiny by the UN's most powerful body while serving their two-year terms. Brazil, Nigeria and Gabon also won easy election. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UN official favours prosecution

The UN's top human rights official backed a report Thursday accusing Israeli forces and Palestinian militants of war crimes during their conflict in Gaza last winter.

Navi Pillay's endorsement of the report by an expert group led by Judge Richard Goldstone came as Israel warned the UN Human Rights Council that approving the document risked undermining Middle East peace.

Pillay told the 47-member council that she supported the report's recommendations, "including its call for urgent action to counter impunity" — meaning that Israel and Hamas must investigate and prosecute those who committed war crimes.

The 575-page report concluded that Israel used disproportionate force, deliberately targeted civilians and used Palestinians as human shields during its Dec. 27-Jan. 18 incursion into the Gaza Strip to root out Palestinian rocket squads.

It accused Palestinian armed groups including Hamas of deliberately targeting civilians and trying to spread terror through rocket attacks on southern Israel. Almost 1,400 Palestinians and 13 Israelis were killed during the conflict.

Pillay said it was necessary for both sides "to carry out impartial, independent, prompt, and effective investigations into reported violations of human rights and humanitarian law" as recommended by the report.

STOP HAIR LOSS

BIO-FEN PLUS™ is a natural health product used in the treatment of hereditary androgenic alopecia (AGA) in adults (male or female pattern baldness.) It contains scientifically calculated proportions of extracts of fenugreek seeds, saw palmetto berries and flax lignans. Each are known to possess an inhibitor of the enzyme responsible for causing male or female pattern baldness. It also contains a mixture of B vitamins, folate and biotin to help metabolize these herbal extracts so that they are more bio-available, and to support the growth of strong and healthy hair.

What causes hereditary hair loss?

Each hair grows from a pocket in the skin called the hair follicle. During its growing phase, the follicle has a bulb-shaped bottom, the center of which is called the dermal papilla. The papilla is fed by very small blood vessels, which bring it food & oxygen and remove wastes. The papilla is highly sensitive to hormones and chemicals secreted by the body (or ingested as a medicine) which impacts hair growth.

It is believed that some individuals have a genetic predisposition to a receding hairline (most common in men) or hair/follicle thinning over larger areas of scalp (more common in women). These conditions result from hormonal changes caused by an enzyme in the dermal papilla called 5-alpha-reductase. This enzyme breaks down the hormone testosterone into dihydrotestosterone (DHT).

Over a period of time, an over abundance of DHT causes the hair follicle to degrade and shortens the active phase of the hair, eventually leading to thinner hair and eventual hair loss.

How does BIO-FEN PLUS™ work?

Specific compounds within the herbal extracts inhibit the 5-alpha-reductase (and therefore reduce DHT) to prevent or slow down the rate of hair loss. This process is the principle by which the prescription drugs such as Propecia (finasteride) work. However, BIO-FEN PLUS™ also contains additional compounds which remove excess cholesterol and testosterone – the building blocks of DHT.

BIO-FEN PLUS™ also contains vitamins to increase blood flow to the small capillaries that feed the hair roots, to deliver the active herbal compounds and remove waste. Therefore, BIO-FEN PLUS™ provides a natural, safer alternative to expensive drugs, and/or expensive & painful hair transplants. As with the prescription alternatives, results vary from person to person, and no one product will work for everyone.

How long must I use BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

BIO-FEN PLUS™ capsules are usually effective at stopping hair loss within the first two months. However, since healthy hair grows only about 1 cm each month, it may take up to three months before you notice that hair growth is increased or further hair loss is stopped.

Anyone experiencing new growth will see it within four to six months. Once results become apparent, some users are able to reduce their BIO-FEN PLUS™ supplement dose to one capsule every second or every third day. Some clients will continue to take BIO-FEN PLUS™ daily. Once you stop completely, however, your hair growth pattern will slowly go back to the point where you started.

How safe is BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

The ingredient combination in BIO-FEN PLUS™ is generally safe for most adults. However, the following cautions are advised:

Folic acid: Consult a health care practitioner if you are uncertain whether or not you are taking adequate vitamin B12, as folate supplementation can mask a Vitamin B12 deficiency.

Vitamin B3: Consult a health care practitioner prior to use if you have impaired liver function.

Vitamin B6: Consult a health care practitioner prior to use if you are taking levodopa.

What is the quality of BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

BIO-FEN PLUS™ is manufactured in Canada according to a quality assurance program called Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP). This ensures that the ingredients are tested for their level of quality, potency & purity, prior to production and again prior to sale.

See our website to locate your nearest Health Food Store or Pharmacy that offers BIO-FEN PLUS™ and other quality products from Hair Grow Technology. If you have any questions or comments about our products that target hair loss and support the growth of strong, healthy hair, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Each BIO-FEN PLUS™ capsule contains (mg/capsule):

Fenugreek (Trigonella feonum graecum) seed extract 4:1	260 mg
Saw palmetto berry extract contains 45% powder, esters & sterols	160 mg
Flax lignans, standardized to 20% secoisolariciresinol diglucoside (SDG)	100 mg
D-calcium pantothenate (Vitamin B5)	10.40 mg
Niacinamide (Vitamin B3)	10.25 mg
Pyridoxine HCl (Vitamin B6)	2.00 mg
Riboflavin (Vitamin B2)	1.58 mg
Folic acid	0.095 mg
Biotin	400 mcg

Non-medicinal ingredients: inert microcrystalline cellulose and vegetable-based magnesium stearate in a veggie-based capsule.

Recommended adult dose: one capsule per day

Making an impact on communities

Al Hatton

With the passing of Thanksgiving, Canadians are unofficially entering the holiday season. Even with the economic downturn that struck last year, an Ipsos Reid poll found that eight in 10 Canadians maintained or increased charitable giving last Christmas. Even with this much-needed and appreciated generosity, the fact remains that poverty and its aggravating or consequent social problems remain a reality in Canada all year long.

According to the Canadian Council on Social Development, 3.4 million Canadians (11.2 per cent of the population) were living in poverty in 2004. Poverty rates were highest among children and youth under the age of 18.

While in a time of economic crisis, it is critical to continue to support those agencies and centres assisting those most in need. Leading academics, policymakers, and front-line workers recognize the need for both fulfilling immediate needs of those in poverty and creating long-term solutions to alleviate poverty. It is the combination of both approaches that will lead to stronger, healthier communities and, therefore, a greater quality of life for all Canadians.

Eradicating Poverty

In advance of the holiday season there is the annual United Way-Centraide campaign (UW-C), run by the 118 United Ways-Centraides (UWs-Cs) across Canada. Next to governments, United Way-Centraide is the largest funder of social services in the country. Collectively, UWs-Cs raised upwards of $480 million last year to be reinvested in their communities.

The high-profile UW-C campaigns fulfil needs that otherwise would not be met. However, for the past few years, UWs-Cs have also been tackling the more challenging problem of reducing poverty.

That's why UW-C now focuses energy and resources to creating "community impact." Community impact is about achieving meaningful, long-term improvements to quality of life in Canadian communities. It's about making fundamental changes to community conditions.

UW-C understands how connected and interdependent we all are. Everyone wins when a child is nourished, when families are financially independent, and when all people have opportunities to live a good life. With each life that improves, everyone is strengthened — communities are stronger.

Al Hatton is president and chief executive officer of United Way of Canada — Centraide Canada.

Signs point to more people being left behind

UrbanCompass

The poverty story in the Greater Toronto Area is well-documented. More than 86,000 people a month now turn to Toronto's Daily Bread Food Bank seeking help. The child poverty rate in Mississauga jumped to 20 per cent from 12 between 1990 and 2005. The middle class is shrinking.

While details of disadvantage are plentiful, it's much less certain how such problems will be addressed in an era of governments preoccupied with reducing massive deficits.

The City of Toronto, backed by the United Way and investments by the provincial and federal governments, does have an aggressive program aimed at addressing need in 13 of the city's most disadvantaged neighbourhoods.

There are plenty of other things governments can do. They could, for instance, require developers to build at least some affordable housing units in every new project. Childcare services could be expanded.

The reality, however, is that public investment won't be enough. People need jobs. And at the moment, it's not at all clear where those jobs will come from. The gutting of the manufacturing sector during this past year has killed both low- and high-end jobs and hit new immigrants particularly hard. Studies suggest that people who arrived in Canada recently were three times more likely to receive pink slips during the economic downturn than their Canadian-born co-workers.

Optimists talk of creative industries and creative-sector jobs that will turn things around in the new economy. They have a point. Some people will definitely land great positions that will allow them to afford everything this city has to offer. All the signs, however, point to many others being left even further behind.

40% of food bank clients in Ontario are children.

One in six children in Ontario live in poverty.

Over the past year, more than 77,000 allegations of abuse and neglect were investigated by Ontario's Children's Aid Societies. More than 27,000 children were in CAS care.

Almost 40% of women assaulted by spouses said their children witnessed the violence; in many cases the violence was severe.

One-third of children seeking mental health services in 2007 were still waiting at the end of the year.

A society is measured by the well-being of its children.

At a time of widespread economic uncertainty, the progress of Ontario's children threatens to be all but overlooked. That's precisely why standing up for them, and their families, has never been more important than it is right now.

In this, our Ontario, too many of our children are denied the basics of a safe home and adequate food and clothing. Too many lack the nurturing family and community supports essential for them to succeed and thrive. Too many aren't developing in the essential ways they must, in order to reach their full potential. And it's been this way for too long, in good times as well as bad.

Today, and every day, we ask all Ontarians to make our children and families, particularly our most vulnerable, a priority in our thoughts and actions. Their well-being is the true measure of our society. At a time when so much is uncertain, and strong families are more important than ever, ensuring that our children continue to grow has never mattered more.

Tale of two economies

Canada's exports stagger, domestic activity booms

Two reports Thursday reinforced recent trends that show a strong domestic Canadian economy propped up by floor-low interest rates and a recovering housing market and a weak manufacturing sector hammered by the sky-high dollar and a squeeze on exports.

"What it's telling us is that low interest rates are working in Canada," said CIBC chief economist Avery Shenfeld. "We've had a number of disappointments on the export front. Where Canada is showing vigour, it's on the domestic front in response to low interest rates."

The most recent evidence is the outsized growth in house sales during the third quarter — given the still weak overall economy. The Canadian Real Estate Association reported that in real terms, sales of existing homes in the country have never been stronger than in the just-completed quarter.

Meanwhile, Statistics Canada figures released early Thursday showed factory shipments fell 2.1 per cent in August as the activity from the U.S. Cash for Clunkers program, which had artificially spurred auto sales in the United States, subsided.

As well, there are few signs of recovery ahead for the battered manufacturing sector as new orders have practically stagnated and unfilled orders fell 4.2 per cent. THE CANADIAN PRESS

135,000 The Canadian Real Estate Association said more than 135,000 units were sold in the July-to-September period — 18 per cent higher than the corresponding period last year before the recession hit.

Canwest gets TSX notice of delisting

MEDIA Canwest Global Communications Corp. announced Thursday it had received notice of delisting from the Toronto Stock Exchange effective at market close Nov. 13.

Trading in Canwest shares, which sit at 23.5 cents, is to remain suspended. The media conglomerate's stock was halted Oct. 5 when it filed for creditor protection under a mountain of debt.

The company Wednesday received approval for a timetable that would see its restructuring completed by the end of January.

Canwest spokesman John Douglas said the company has several alternative options, which include appealing the delisting, as well as listing on another stock exchange. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pearson faces slow recovery

Canadian airports, including Toronto's Pearson international airport, face a slow recovery after the recession caused a significant erosion of passenger traffic, says the DBRS debt rating agency.

The ratings service said it expects sluggish traffic conditions well into 2010.

The country's airports have seen their business drop over the last 12 months, although the losses have been less severe than in past recessions.

However, traffic was down five to seven per cent as of the summer at most airports — with the exception of Vancouver, which saw its volumes drop by 11.6 per cent as of August because of sharp declines in its international and transborder business from peaks in 2008.

Airport authorities are forecasting that traffic will decrease by four to nine per cent overall in 2009, with a modest rebound in 2010. Vancouver is expected to drop 8.9 per cent overall, Toronto 6.4 per cent, Montreal 5.6 per cent, Edmonton five per cent and Ottawa four per cent. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hope alive in Leafs' room

Team gets day off, lighthearted practice to try to stop skid

The messages have been sent about benchings, about having fun, about remaining calm and about Maple Leafs GM Brian Burke's belief in his players.

The questions that will be answered Saturday, when the Leafs try again for that elusive first win, is whether those messages have sunk in and whether the team can rebuild its shaken confidence.

"The pin prick in our balloon was Montreal," said Leafs coach Ron Wilson. "Going into overtime and losing, it seems to have shaken our confidence coming out of training camp.

"We've got to fix how we handle adversity, otherwise this could be the longest season of our lives. I'm pretty sure we have a strong enough group. Burke hit the reset button, so I think we'll be fine."

Resetting that confidence and hearing some positive feedback is what the last couple days have been about. The team had Wednesday off and was told to stay away from the rink.

On Thursday, Burke went into the dressing room after an upbeat practice.

"He said he believes in every one of us and to relax," said defenceman Garnet Exelby.

Mike Komisarek, who could use some positive reinforcement given his miscues, enjoyed the chat.

"Burkie's always straight forward and honest," said Komisarek. "Having him come here and look us in the eye and deliver his message was awesome.

"It calmed everyone down."

Despite the 0-5-1 start, there are reasons for hope:

Smiles and laughter from the players after Thursday's lighthearted workout seem to have relieved some tension; goalie Jonas Gustavsson is expected to practise today and be ready for next week's road trip; and Phil Kessel participated in nearly all the drills yesterday and is on target for his mid-November scheduled return. Legend of The Herminator

Field of Play

Scott Russell

To see him cry at his retirement was startling. Hermann Maier, the indestructible force of downhill skiing, is human after all.

Here was a man who had come to define his sport. As a teenager he was told he was too scrawny to make the powerful Austrian team, so he retreated to his hometown of Flachau to work as a bricklayer in the summer and a ski instructor in the winter.

He emerged to conquer the alpine world.

In all, Maier claimed 54 World Cup victories, four overall World Cup titles, four Olympic medals, and three world championships.

Not bad for a cast off.

Maier even survived a 2001 motorcycle crash where he nearly lost his life to win at Kitzbuhel again. It was the kind of victory that defied comprehension. Kitzbuhel has destroyed the dreams of the most physically sound skiers — much less those who have had their lives reconstructed as Maier had.

"I would argue that it is the biggest comeback to glory of any athlete ever," Todd Brooker noted. Brooker, one of the Crazy Canucks of the late 1970s and '80s, also won at Kitzbuhel and suffered its devastation when a horrific crash there hastened his retirement.

"No one could ever say that Maier didn't give it everything he had," Brooker continued. "He has been an example of steadfast determination to achieve a lifetime goal. His was to be the best ski racer on the planet."

Alpine Canada's chief athletics officer, Max Gartner, is in agreement. Gartner who is Austrian born, first pointed to Maier as someone for Canadians to watch in 1996, the year The Herminator roared onto the scene and started piling up wins as a 23-year-old.

"His focus on every little detail was unprecedented," Gartner said. "He showed that almost anything can be overcome and his legacy is that he moved the sport to a new level."

To watch Maier compete was to understand that no race was over until he had descended the mountain and delivered his patented aggressive attack. The other athletes all understood that he alone set the standard.

Austria's Hermann Maier, shown here competing at the 1998 Olympics in Nagano, retired this week.

For those Canadians of a certain generation, meeting Maier was akin to encountering Jean Beliveau or Bobby Orr.

You just knew The Herminator was a living legend. There was no one else quite like him.

All-Canadian USL final is Montreal's to lose

WHITECAPS AT IMPACT

"Soccer is a funny game. The ball can bounce in any direction. We have to be prepared for a very difficult game."
Mauro Biello, Montreal Impact

SOCCER With a one-goal edge and home-field advantage, the Montreal Impact would seem in command for the second leg of the United Soccer Leagues' First Division final against the Vancouver Whitecaps.

But Impact veteran Mauro Biello isn't taking anything for granted against the defending champion Whitecaps.

The Impact won the first leg of the two-game, total-goals final 3-2 in Vancouver last weekend. The second leg is set for Saturday (Fox Sports World Canada, 2:30 p.m. ET) before a sellout crowd of 13,034 at Saputo Stadium.

"The one-goal lead doesn't guarantee us anything," Biello said Thursday. "You have to play the game and we have to impose our game like we did in Vancouver.

"If we sit back and try to defend the lead we could be in trouble. Soccer is a funny game. The ball can bounce in any direction. We have to be prepared for a very difficult game and if we do that, we can be successful."

The Whitecaps, who squeaked into the seventh and final playoff spot and then upset Portland and Carolina in the playoffs, are certainly not hanging their heads.

"Our whole season has been an underdog deal," said midfielder Wes Knight. "We can play with nothing to lose.

"We can come into this stadium and just give it our all. And a team that is as resilient as we have been can perform better when we have our backs to the wall."

The atmosphere was relaxed and friendly Thursday as both teams crammed into a tent at the stadium for a lunch to promote the final and hand out the league's individual awards, including three to the Whitecaps: Marcus Haber as rookie of the year, Charles Gebeke as league goal-scoring champion and Knight for leading in assists.

Portland's Gavin Wilkinson was named coach of the year while Puerto Rico's Cristian Arrieta earned MVP and defender of the year honours. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto FC to start third 'keeper in must-win match with Real Salt Lake

MLS PREVIEW

Real Salt Lake at Toronto

REAL AT TORONTO

SOCCER Brian Edwards, who began the season as Toronto FC's third-string goalkeeper, is getting the start Saturday in a must-win game.

The 25-year-old from North Carolina got the nod Thursday from coach Chris Cummins as Stefan Frei continues to nurse a dislocated finger.

It will mark back-to-back starts for Edwards, a second-year player who was behind rookie Frei and veteran Greg Sutton on the depth chart when the season kicked off.

"I try to prepare every week like I'm going to play and it finally happened for me last week," said Edwards, who made a pair of saves and confidently snared a few crosses in a 1-1 tie with San Jose at BMO Field last Saturday.

TFC (9-10-9) will need a strong performance out of Edwards as they welcome Real Salt Lake (10-11-7) to BMO Field Saturday in a game they must win to keep their playoff hopes alive.

With two games remaining, TFC is in a three-way tie for 10th place in Major League Soccer, two points out of the eighth and final playoff spot. Salt Lake is one point ahead.

Loss to Esks would eliminate Argos from playoff contention

CFL PREVIEW
Edmonton at Toronto

There's no longer a margin of error for Kerry Joseph and the Toronto Argonauts.

The Argos head into their home game Friday night against the Edmonton Eskimos (TSN, 7:30 p.m. ET) in a precarious position. A loss will eliminate the struggling team from CFL playoff contention for the second straight year.

"I think it's more important that we know we have to win and control what we can control," said Joseph. "We know that mathematically we're still alive.

"We know we need some help, but at the same time if we don't take care of our business, nothing else matters. These guys (Eskimos) are the next guys on the schedule and we definitely need to win to get out of this losing slump that we're in."

The Argos (3-11) definitely need a miracle to reach the post-season and are limping into this contest having lost four straight and nine of their last 10. There were health concerns about Joseph, too, after he suffered a neck injury in a 32-22 road loss to Saskatchewan that originally was feared to be a concussion, but the 2007 CFL MVP says he's ready to go physically.

"I've been fine all week long," he said. "Everything has been good, the body feels good. Just ready to go (Saturday)."

But Toronto could be in trouble if Joseph is injured, as untested rookie Stephen Reaves is listed as the backup. Veteran Cody Pickett, who was the club's starter for a stretch this season, is listed as the No. 3 quarterback due to a torn oblique muscle.

The game is just as important to the struggling Eskimos (6-8), who have dropped five of their last six contests.

Edmonton is just four points behind Saskatchewan and Calgary — who are tied for first — and two points behind third-place B.C., but also tied with Winnipeg and Hamilton (both also 6-8) in the crossover battle for third in the East Division.

Teixeira, Hunter turn prophetic: Angels to meet Yankees in ALCS

MLB PLAYOFFS
Angels at Yankees

BASEBALL Mark Teixeira remembers calling Torii Hunter last winter.

"After I signed with the Yankees, I said, 'You know, good luck to you guys. Hopefully, we'll see you in the ALCS,'" Teixeira recalled. And then he repeated the message when Hunter reached first base during the first series between the teams in May.

"I'm like, 'OK, I like that,'" Hunter told his former teammate. "And now we're here."

Having dispatched the Yankees in the first round of the playoffs in 2002 and 2005, the Angels meet New York for the first time in the AL championship series starting Friday night — weather permitting.

John Lackey pitches for the high-flying Angels, who won their fifth AL West title in six seasons under manager Mike Scioscia and then swept wild-card Boston in the division series.

Back in the post-season after missing out in 2008, New York swept Minnesota to reach the ALCS for the first time in five years and goes with CC Sabathia, who could get three starts in the best-of-seven matchup.

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Gerard Butler seeks revenge for the death of his family in Law Abiding Citizen.

Law Abiding Citizen is an efficient, high-concept thriller that hits enough of the right notes to entertain, but doesn't quite work as well as it should.

The screenplay is filled with twists, but unfortunately most of them are obvious. The suspense sequences are well crafted, but don't really offer anything new.

It's an easy way to kill a few hours, just don't expect to be raving about a new genre classic when it is over.

This is a fast food kind of movie. It goes down smooth, but offers nothing substantial afterwards beyond an icky aftertaste.

Jamie Foxx and Gerard Butler face off as a career-focused attorney and criminal mastermind respectively. Bulter's wife and child are murdered in the opening scene and Foxx's lawyer strikes up a plea bargain with one of the lowlifes responsible to further his career.

Ten years later Butler launches an insanely complicated revenge plot that sees nearly everyone involved with the case have their life threatened while Butler is locked up in prison and seemingly powerless.

The premise isn't bad, it just stretches believability pretty far and holds few surprises.

Foxx and Butler are superstars of the moment and do a decent job with their roles, but never get a chance to stretch beyond playing established character types. This was most likely a paycheck movie for both, but at least neither of them phoned in their performance.

Director F. Gary Grey knows how to use the camera and stages a few eye-popping set pieces tailor made for MTV-raised audiences, but the movie never gels as a whole.

Unfortunately none of the talent involved can raise the material above the clichéd screenplay, nor does it even feel like a decent B-movie.

Law Abiding Citizen is neither surprisingly good nor disappointingly bad; it's just thoroughly mediocre.

Damned United winner all the way

The Damned United

Director: Tom Hooper
Stars: Michael Sheen, Colm Meaney
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕½

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Soccer fans — or football fans, depending on which side of the pond you reside — are among the most rabid in sports.

Passionate, devoted, occasionally demented, its followers have elevated their chosen pastime with a reverence often reserved for religion. Non-believers need not apply.

The good news is that director Tom Hooper's latest cinematic love letter to the game, The Damned United, can be easily enjoyed and embraced by the less fervent football enthusiasts. It relies on its characters to provide its pleasures. And, rest assured, it's a picture of many pleasures, indeed.

Hooper and writer Peter Morgan (Frost/Nixon) freely adapt David Peace's equally freely-written account of iconic ex-footballer and manager Brian Clough (Frost/Nixon and The Queen's Michael Sheen) who, after becoming a household name in England by leading various disparaged teams to victory, bit off more than he could chew and got too big for his britches.

Clough's miserable 44-day tenure as manager of Leeds United in 1974 is the stuff of legend and serves as the framework of Hooper's impressionistic, irreverent portrait of the flamboyant, still controversial figure.

Sheen manages to both successfully channel the late Clough's charisma while sculpting a magnificent version of the man he might have been, if alcohol and corrosive ego hadn't darkened his final days.

The football action, when it does occur, is thrilling, but Hooper is more concerned with the dynamic between Clough and his right hand man, Pete Taylor (the great Timothy Spall) and how that relationship endured, evolved and defined a pivotal chapter in British sports history (forget I Love You Man or Funny People, this is the best "bromance" movie of the year).

Everyone is buzzing on Sheen's buoyant turn for an Oscar nod. But The Damned United, with it's breezy pace, laugh out loud comedy and sharply written, wrenching drama is so much more than a great performance. It's a great movie, full stop.

Where The Wild Things Are

Director: Spike Jonze
Stars: Catherine Keener, Max Records
Classification: PG
Rating: ●●●●½

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Max Records stars in Where The Wild Things Are.

Adapting a much-beloved children's book into a feature film is no small task, especially when that book contains only 10 sentences.

In Spike Jonze's Where the Wild Things Are, the bare-bones story — recalcitrant Max (Max Records) is sent to his room by his exhausted mother (Catherine Keener), only to escape to a fantasy realm filled with massive, unpredictable creatures who crown him their king — is still there, and the massive puppets with computer-enhanced faces beautifully realize the two-dimension drawings in Mauric Sendak's original. But there's much more in the film.

The fact that the line between fantasy and reality is so blurred is key in transporting the audience along with Max. Because to him this is all very real, and it should be to us as well. Although the realm he enters is one of fantasy and allegory, the textures and visuals are rendered with striking clarity, thanks to some impressive scenic design and camera-work. It doesn't hurt that the cast voicing the looming, lurching wild things is top-notch, including James Gandolfini, Catherine O'Hara, Chris Cooper, Lauren Ambrose and Forest Whitaker.

But the movie rests on the slight shoulders of newcomer Records. It's a lot to ask of a kid, but Records is a natural, channeling Jonze's vision beautifully. Rarely has the tumultuous feeling of childhood, with all its swirling, outsize emotions, been so accurately put to film.

Of course, the downside to adapting such a famous work is that everyone coming in has their own expectations and attachments to the story, and that is where the film may falter. As the filmmakers have made clear, this isn't a children's movie. It's a movie about childhood. And childhood is messy.

Plain overwrought melodrama

The Burning Plain

Director: Guillermo Arriaga
Stars: Charlize Theron, Kim Basinger
Classification: STC
Rating: ●½

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Kim Basinger stars in The Burning Plain.

REVIEW Guillermo Arriaga's screenplays for Babel and 21 Grams are among the most compelling multi-narratives of recent memory. However, one should always remember that it was also Oscar-nominated director Alejandro González Iñárritu who made spectacle of such entangled plots.

With The Burning Plain, Arriaga makes his directorial debut and cannot lean on Iñárritu to bail him out from his own vapid characters or overwrought, melodramatic storyline.

Juggling three relationships and their own unique perspective, The Burning Plain begins with a shot of a rundown mobile home in flames in the middle of the desert. Just as quickly, the story turns to Charlize Theron playing an angst-filled Oregon restaurant manager who manages to run a successful business despite her own self-destructive behaviour.

Her secret begins unraveling once we're introduced to matriarch Gina (Kim Basinger) whose adulterous affair with a Mexican named Nick is doomed for destruction. Suspicious and confused, her daughter starts up her own forbidden relationship with Nick's son while a strange hospitalized pilot wants to introduce his daughter to her mother.

Confused? Well, don't be. Instead of spoiling the so-called twists, I'll let you figure it out ten minutes into the film since that's how early the connections between plotlines become pretty clear. That'll leave you with about 100 minutes to sit and watch close-ups of agonized faces you don't particularly care about staring off into no discernible space presumably intending to insinuate the greater mystery you figured out from the opening shot of the movie.

Believe me, you'll be counting down the minutes until you see that burning trailer show up again.

Love letter to forgotten icon

Yoo-Hoo Mrs. Goldberg

Director: Aviva Kemper
Stars: Gertrude Berg, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Norman Lear
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕½

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Gertrude Berg was the Oprah Winfrey of her time. The woman wrote, produced, and starred in one of the most popular radios shows of the '30s before taking it to television and essentially inventing the TV sitcom.

She was one of the biggest stars in the world and created a media empire. Unfortunately, you've probably never heard of her.

Given her massive fame and importance to the history of television, Gertrude Berg should be remembered as fondly as Lucille Ball and yet she has all but disappeared.

That's where the new documentary Yoo-Hoo Mrs. Goldberg comes in.

Director Aviva Kempner has made a career out of creating documentaries that shift the spotlight to underappreciated Jewish cultural icons (perhaps best known for the award-winning The Life And Times Of Hank Greenberg). Yoo-Hoo Mrs. Goldberg follows the loose structure of her previous work, examining the life of Gertrude Berg through archival footage and interviews with living relatives and experts in the field.

Best known for the sitcom The Goldbergs about a lower class Jewish family sharing an apartment in New York (everything from The Honeymooners to Seinfeld stole a little from the format she created), the writer/actress struggled her way to the top through hard work, was a figurehead for female independence, and fought the blacklist.

Yoo-Hoo Mrs. Goldberg is a charming and enlightening documentary that does a good job of showcasing Gertrude Berg's life, work, and influence.

The film might feel a little slight, but that's entirely appropriate given that her achievements were in the field of light entertainment.

Berg's involvement in the McCarthy era and the death of her blacklisted co-star gives the film a nice dramatic edge, but for the most part the movie is a touchingly nostalgic love letter to a forgotten icon.

Hair goes from roots to race

Good Hair

Director: Chris Rock
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕

RICHARD CROUSE
for Metro Canada

Comedian Chris Rock combs out bigger issues from the lighweight topic of coiffure culture in Good Hair.

REVIEW On the surface Good Hair sounds like the thinnest idea for a movie since Andy Warhol documented 24 hours in the life of the Empire State Building using only one static shot.

Comedian Chris Rock's look at the African-American hair industry could have been a bit on the gimmicky side but he and director Jeff Stilson wring every ounce of interest from the subject.

Inspired by his young daughter asking, "Daddy, how come I don't have good hair?," Rock uses gentle humour to examine the relationship black women have with their hair. He interviews everyone from teen star Raven-Symoné to author Maya Angelou to decipher why and how African-American women go to such lengths to modify their hair. They discuss weaves — hair extensions described as "the graduation of the wig" — and relaxer, a potion used to straighten hair for a more "European look" that several women refer to as "creamy crack" because of their dependence on the toxic balm.

It's all rather light and breezy and would be kind of inconsequential if Rock and company hadn't broadened the film to examine how hair care in the African-American community became a billion dollar industry and why more of the businesses that feed this industry aren't black owned.

"There's something wrong when we can't control something as basic as the hair on our heads," says Al Sharpton (called the "Dalai Lama of Relaxer").

Good Hair works because it cleverly uses a study of African-American hair culture as the gateway to examine larger issues of race without ever sounding preachy or pedantic.

Is it perfect? No, a hair competition that bookends the film could easily have been shortened or cut altogether, but it's worth the price of admission to watch Rock talk hair — male and female — with the folks at a barbershop or hear Ice-T talking about getting a mug shot taken while wearing curlers.

Ultimately Good Hair's most important message is summed up by Al Sharpton who says, "The stuff on top of their heads isn't as important as the stuff inside their heads."

Mark Stuhlbarg plays the lead in A Serious Man, dubbed the Coens' "most personal film yet."

Coens back in form

A Serious Man

Directors: Ethan Coen, Joel Coen
Stars: Michael Stuhlbarg
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕½

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

There were a lot of mixed reviews about last year's Burn After Reading but there should be no doubt that the Oscar-winning Coen brothers have returned to form with A Serious Man.

More in line with the sibling auteurs' earlier works such as Fargo or even Barton Fink, the quirky comedy focuses on a meek Jewish physics professor named Larry Gopnick (Michael Stuhlbarg) whose perfect late-'60s suburban life suddenly and inexplicably turns against him: His wife wants a divorce, his children no longer respect him, the sexy neighbour torments him by sunbathing nude and he's being blackmailed at work while his tenure is in jeopardy and that's just the beginning.

Needless to say, Gopnick finds his life spiraling into a spiritual abyss, leaving him to turn to the advice of three hapless rabbis with the hopes that they can solve his crisis and explain how to become "a serious man".

If that sounds somewhat philosophical, that's because the Coen brothers question notions of faith and meaning in what they've described as their "most personal work yet."

As with most of their films, their rich, surreal characters often have more bubbling under the surface than what first appears allowing them a mystery to escape farce and elicit deep contemplation.

Ditching big stars in favour of lesser-known Yiddish thespians certainly gives the superb comedy an added authenticity but Stuhlbarg steals the film playing a man who maintains a brash optimism even amidst his darkest hour.

A Serious Man is seriously fine filmmaking.

Naughty bits at fest

Despite its flamboyantly-raunchy title, Darryl's Hard Liquor and Porn Film Festival isn't about feting alcohol-fuelled, hardcore pornography. In fact, much of its lively output rarely strays beyond an edgier, '70s era equivalent to a PG rating.

The long running — now in its 10th smash year — Toronto institution was formed in the living room of founder Darryl Gold, who, after challenging his tippling party guests to make their own quirky films about sex, eventually evolved the concept into the entity it is now.

With assistance from occasional filmmaker Jill Rosenberg, Darryl's Hard Liquor and Porn Film Festival (running tomorrow night at The Bloor Cinema) literally combs the planet tracking down its 100 per cent flab-free content.

Entries must be short — the rule is under five minutes long — funny, and raise our cultural fascination — or obsession — with sex to sometimes deliriously abstract heights.

Patrons pack the theatre and are encouraged to dress in their favorite porn star outfits. It is something that, if you sneak a peek at the photos from the DHLP website, they more often than not enthusiastically embrace.

This years line-up sees saucy international romps as Trolls, a film about kids finally figuring out what goes on behind mom and dad's closed door; Boob, a breast implant story gone wrong; and Mmilk, an animated effort that asks what would happen if King Kong and his muse Ann Darrow actually had consummated their relationship.

Creepy, crazy step-parents

InFocus

Richard Crouse
metronews.ca/infocus

A little more than kin," says Hamlet, "and less than kind."

That was Shakespeare's eloquent way of describing his main character's stepfather. Less eloquent is the line from 1987's The Stepfather, "He's just some crazy creep! He's not my father," but you get the idea; replacement parents have not been treated well by pop culture.

That trend continues this weekend with The Stepfather, a remake of the underrated 1987 gem that launched Lost star Terry O'Quinn to cult celebrity. Playing a psychotic man determined to find the perfect family he's kind of a talented Mr. Ripley type but his flair is for marrying widows and offing them when he discovers any crack in his new family's flawless facade.

The Stepfather, a remake of the 1987 cult film, hits theatres today.

This movie spawned two sequels with diminishing results. The first follow-up, titled Stepfather II: Make Room for Daddy, was released in theatres, a third sequel, however, bypassed theatres and went straight to television leading Variety to joke, "if there's a fourth issue, it'll be a home movie."

Similar in theme to The Stepfather, but way more sinister is The Night of the Hunter. Heavy-lidded tough guy actor Robert Mitchum is Harry Powell, a preacher with a complicated relationship with God. He's also a grifter and killer who marries the widow of a man who hid $10,000 inside of one of his daughter's dolls. Powell will stop at nothing to find that money, including terrorizing his new step kids.

Roger Ebert loves the movie, calling Powell one of Hollywood's most unforgettable villains. And how. With the words LOVE and HATE tattooed on his knuckles and an unforgiving attitude toward sin, he is unpredictable and chilling.

Stepfathers have had their share of screen time but stepmothers haven't been ignored. In the imaginatively titled The Stepmother, a woman is forced to seduce her new husband's son as part of a blackmail plot.

Stepmom from outer space Kim Basinger tries to fit in on earth in My Stepmother is an Alien despite making fifty-course breakfasts and shrinking a hundred dollar bill to miniature size when a shopkeeper asks if she has anything smaller.

On film, it seems, stepparents come in all shapes, sizes and even from different planets.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

A punk riot of their own

Taqwacore: The Birth of Punk Islam

Director: Omar Majeed
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕½

IAN GORMELY
for Metro Canada

A scene from the documentary Taqwacore: The Birth of Punk Islam.

Inspired by the similarly named book, Taqwacore presents the marriage of two seemingly disparate and misunderstood cultures: Islam and punk rock.

The film is essentially two movies tied together by the overall goal of showcasing how the two cultures can co-exist. The first half follows The Taqwacore author and movement guru Michael Muhammad Knight and a bus load of Muslim-American and Muslim-Canadian punk rockers with band names like The Kominas and song titles like "Sharia Law in the U.S.A." as they tour across the country.

The tour itself is pretty standard for what amounts to a bus load of misfits playing loud music. But it's at the open mic night of North America's largest gathering of Muslims where they run into their harshest critics. The all-girl Secret Trial Five from Vancouver cause a near riot of young Muslims upset with the idea of a woman singing. However, the brazen act of defiance also inspires nearly as many in the crowd as it offended.

The film then switches gears, following Knight to Pakistan where he reunites with members of The Kominas. While trying to reconnect with the spiritual aspect of Islam he had long ago abandoned, Knight and his friends try and connect their music with Pakistani Muslims. After a series of disappointing gigs with other groups, they decide to put on their own DIY show on a local rooftop.

Director Omar Majeed does a good job establishing that though all the band members are Muslim, their music is not preaching Islam. Rather, they're using references to their culture while projecting the youth rage for which punk is known.

But the film loses focus as it follows Knight to Pakistan. There it shifts focus from a film about a youth movement to Knight's own personal journey. And while that's certainly a valid narrative on its own, in the context of the film's first half, it feels off topic and slightly confusing.

Despite this, Taqwacore presents a middle way for Muslim youth living in North America that balances secularism and spiritualism.

Sharp slice of Canadian indie

Eating Buccaneers

Director: Bill Keenan
Stars: Leah Pinsent, Peter Keleghan
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

A scene from the dark comedy Eating Buccaneers.

All the ducks are in place for Eating Buccaneers to be an obnoxious, no-budget Canadian indie gab fest, full of that eternally aggravating smugness that seems to permeate a great bulk of our government funded features.

But miraculously it's not. In fact it's an often convulsively funny, rarely dull, sharply written and amusingly performed slice of absurdity.

Written and directed by Toronto comedy writer Bill Keenan, the film is sort of a blend of Lost and The Office, with a gaggle of alternately likeable and despicable ad agency shills crashing their private jet into the middle of the deep, dense Canadian backwoods and fighting for survival.

Led by ultra-vain CEO Jerry (Peter Keleghan, best known as Lloyd Braun from Seinfeld), the team is stranded with no sustenance save for a small reserve of their latest clients wares, a high calorie protein bar called Buccaneer.

As the hope of immediate rescue dims, tensions mount, egos clash, corporate facades crash and the last few Buccaneer bars begin mysteriously disappearing.

The tone of Eating Buccaneers is light and goofy, but there's an undercurrent of the macabre and pessimism (talks of cannibalism prevail) that keeps the movie somewhat grounded in Lord of the Flies-esque urgency.

Reunion parade

SoundCheck

There are four reasons for your band to reunite: (1) The post-break-up projects aren't working out; (2) a lack of portable skills has left you with a job at the drive-thru; (3) you discover that rock 'n' roll doesn't come with a pension plan; and (4) promoters are offering to throw boatloads of money at you. If you can stand being together with the old crew for just a few more months, maybe you can enjoy that spotlight one more time.

With that in mind, here's an update on the reunions we've seen this year.

Blink 182: Hugely successful but marred by the death of DJ AM, the only other person to survive last fall's plan crash with drummer Travis Barker. The last show was last weekend. Now what?

Blur: All over, apparently. After playing a series of ultra high-profile gigs, they've all gone their separate ways to count their money.

Don't expect any more shows or any new music. Bass player Alex James is making royal cheese for Prince Charles. No, really, he is.

Cranberries: The day singer Dolores O'Riordan released her second solo album, it was announced that the original line-up was coming back together for a tour and possibly an album. Things start in Baltimore on Nov. 12.

Creed: Singer Scott Stapp told me that he needed to right some wrongs dating back to 2002-04, including a show in Chicago that was so bad fans actually filed a class-action lawsuit.

A new album called Full Circle will be in stores on the Oct. 27. The first single, Overcome, actually did much better than most might have expected.

Faith No More: Only Europe has had a chance to see FNM since they got back together in February and the reviews have been rapturous. Why won't they play North America?

Jane's Addiction: Before they embarked on a very successful roadtrip with NIN, we were promised a new album featuring the original line-up. So where is this album?

Public Image Ltd: Okay, so it's only Johnny Lydon (né Rotten). Only a handful of British shows have been announced.

Stone Temple Pilots: They've held it together more than 18 months now. Can they survive the Canadian tour that starts in Victoria on Nov. 7?

Suede: Not officially announced yet, but singer Bret Anderson has said publicly that he's open to it.

Territory is the followup to Two Hours Traffic's Polaris Music Prize-nominated album Little Jabs.

New musical Territory

Two Hours Traffic displays growing confidence on new disc

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

Two Hours Traffic's new album is a yin/yang interpretation of the power-pop they love.

The yin of the Charlottetown four-piece's breakthrough disc, 2007's Little Jabs (a Polaris Music Prize prize nominee) is reflected in Territory's eponymous title track. Fans of the band's older work will warm to layered guitars and sing-along breakdowns.

The yang comes one track earlier. Wicked Side recalls Spoon's focus on arrangement and tone. Built around a double-tracked bass line and "dancey" drums, the track chugs in a continuous groove more like New Order than the New Pornographers. A Wurlitzer organ roars the song's dynamism, while guitar gently churns underneath.

"We didn't want to use every sound we could, but rather let the song speak for itself, and not gloss it up with too many overdubs."
Liam Corcoran

"(With that song) we wanted to signal to everyone we're doing different things," said singer-guitarist Liam Corcoran. "It took a while for us to become confident enough to just keep it to a bass and drum groove. We thought the song sounds cool with all that space, and so decided to leave it as is — that we don't need four guitars."

Two Hours Traffic has always worked at distilling pop to its base elements: a creative direction partly attributed to undergraduate studies in chemistry and partly to a love of Nick Lowe sparked by their mentor Joel Plaskett (who produced both Little Jabs and Territory). But like many young bands, this fledgling focus on craft was hidden under heavy effects.

"When you first get into the studio, it's easy to stack guitars on one another: To loop the guitars and just blast people away," explained Corcoran. "That comes with a lack of confidence. But that's not happening this time. We didn't want to use every sound we could, but rather let the song speak for itself, and not gloss it up with too many overdubs."

The band's growing confidence is also reflected in the new album's lyrics. Much of the material comes out of deep conversations held on tour. Cross-country bus rides, shifting landscapes and late nights away from friends and family can lead to ruminations on loss and spirituality — subjects reflected on tracks like Sing a Little Hymn and Lost Boys.

"After playing Little Jabs songs over and over again, we felt we had already done enough sweet, pretty songs about young love," said Corcoran. "(I think) it's harder to stand in front of people and sing darker songs; to dig a little deeper ... We're kind of hovering between the two worlds ... (and) at times, you start to wonder if maybe you should be settling down."

Measha makes a comeback

Soprano ready to sing again four months after heart surgery

JOHN KEILLOR
for Metro Canada

After her June quadruple bypass, soprano Measha Brueggergosman's only 2009 Ontario show will be held at a church on the corner of Toronto's King and Simcoe, a surprisingly intimate venue where lucky ticket holders can see her fully recovered.

"Oh I'm fine," laughs Brueggergosman, on the phone from her Toronto home, "they just cracked my chest open."

The 32-year-old media darling is as sunny as ever. Her hair-raising heart surgery hardly comes up: she seems more interested in having the right accompanist.

"I host a TV show called Berlin Arte Lounge, for classical and other arts," explains Brueggergosman. "It's filmed in this fabulously skuzzy dirty techno bar in Maria am Ostbahnhof. Andreas who plays on that program will be in Toronto too!"

Accompanying Brueggergosman will be pianist Andreas Kern, who was born in South Africa and trained in Berlin. Together, their Toronto show will be a benefit for in support of AMREF — the African Medical & Research Foundation — a cause that's literally close to her heart.

"It's fitting that this is my first recital back (in Ontario) because I've benefitted from a tremendous amount of generosity in my life," says Brueggergosman. "It's a blessing to sing for my people again, finally. It's an honour to give back to my community. As a city and as a province and as a country we are so lucky. Meanwhile, people in Northern Uganda have no clean running water and live in mud huts.

"Five per cent of my income goes to AMREF," she adds. AMREF is also in the business of extending basic education to young girls, which is absolutely crucial to developing nations becoming more self-sufficient.

Brueggergosman and Kern's program is packed with material that we associate with her, including Schubert, Wolf and spirituals, which are fairly guaranteed to amp up the atmosphere at St. Andrew's. Schubert and Wolf were perhaps the most tragic and soulful songwriters of Romantic Era, dying young and misunderstood and destitute in Vienna. Even a little charity could have saved them. Their untimely deaths remind us how even just a little kindness can make all the difference.

But if we can learn anything from Brueggergosman, it's how hope and courage prevails. That's because she's all heart. "This show is really about promoting solutions to help West Africa," she says. Count on Measha to make recovery and performance and charity into a single act.

The couple were married in July 2006 and have no children together. Lavigne cited "irreconcilable differences."

Mangan plays Nice

Vancouver singer-songwriter writes about what he knows

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

Dan Mangan was recently awarded the XM Radio Verge Award for Artist of the Year. Nice, Nice, Very Nice is his latest album.

For Dan Mangan, the times are a-changin'.

That phrase sums up the Vancouver-based folkie's worldview. From lyrics to performances to on-tour daydreams about his home city, Mangan is constantly focused on change.

On his latest album, Nice, Nice, Very Nice, songs like Tina's Glorious Comeback reference the small differences that Mangan notices each time he returns home. The city's development is increasing in scope and speed as the 2010 Olympics draw near, and as Mangan points out, some things get lost. And for someone who's spent the last four years on the road, it is often these losses that stand out.

"A record is fixed, it's like a snapshot of that moment of recording, but the songs on it are living and aging, and change in various ways."
Dan Mangan

"With the Olympics coming to Vancouver, the city is changing a lot. I'm not anti-Olympics, and not pro (Olympics) — I'm just observing how it's changing," he said. "The line 'We're not us anymore' is really about Vancouver … I love Vancouver, but I have a bit of nostalgia from when I was younger."

Mangan points to Ron Sexsmith for inspiration, especially his observation that the goal of writing should be to find a unique take on an old theme. Following the adage to "write what you know," Mangan's favourite books and songs focus on revealing universal truths through slices of human nature. This detail-oriented approach is heard in songs that reference local diners, gas-station coffee and the awkwardness of budding scenester love.

"I really like people who think small — who can take these complex human paradigms and sum them up in lines that make you smile," he said. "Jeff Tweedy from Wilco is great at that. Vonnegut too. He really puts humour into it, and can turn a phrase on its head so it leaves you with a smirk."

Mangan, who recently claimed XM Verge Award's Artist of the Year, is similarly focused on change when performing. For his upcoming tour, he's shuffled the band, bringing in new instruments (an upright bass, trumpet, violin, and wooden percussion sticks) and new musicians. While the melody, chords and lyrics stay the same, he hopes the new dynamic will shift the feel and sound of the songs.

"My M.O from day one (has been) to surround myself with people that I think are better than me. It's like snowboarding — you go with someone good, so that you get better," he said. "A record is fixed, it's like a snapshot of that moment of recording, but the songs on it are living and aging, and change in various ways … That really intrigues me."

Sense of humour aids in Swift recovery

Country star makes light of infamous Kanye West snub in hosting SNL

Taylor Swift hosts SNL Nov. 7.

Taylor Swift will have the stage to herself next month — with no interruptions — when she hosts Saturday Night Live.

The only question is: who will play Kanye West?

Last month, West hijacked Swift's acceptance speech after she became the first country star to win best female video at the MTV Video Music Awards. West grabbed the mike and declared that Beyoncé's nominated video for Single Ladies was "one of the best videos of all time."

"I've been thinking about skit ideas for a long time," said 19-year-old Swift. "There are definitely some hilarious things that have happened to me over the past couple of months that I think will be pretty substantial skits."

Swift called the chance to host SNL on Nov. 7 "mind-blowing," and said it's been difficult to keep it a secret since producers asked her during the summer. She said she loved being a musical guest on the show in January, and will perform again when she hosts.

"I love being around people who I feel have a different kind of creative genius," said Swift. "And the funny genius is definitely a fascinating one to be around."

Swift joins a group of artists who have done double duty on the show, including Justin Timberlake, Sting and Janet Jackson.

Like Timberlake, Swift hopes to work with cast member Andy Samberg on a digital short music video.

"Of course I've been such a fan for a long time," said Swift, "but I've gone back and re-watched everything over the past couple of months. And digital shorts would be so much fun to do, because they've been done so well."

In addition to SNL, Swift will perform on Dancing With the Stars on Oct. 27.

She has been nominated for four Country Music Association Awards, including entertainer of the year, the youngest to receive the honour. She's had five No. 1 country singles and two consecutive No. 1 pop songs. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

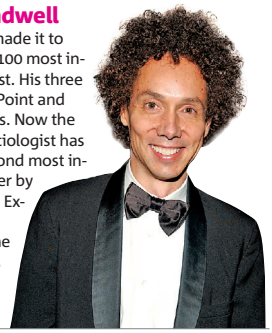
1 Malcolm Gladwell

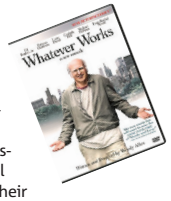


AUTHOR He has made it to Time Magazine's 100 most influential people list. His three books — Blink, The Tipping Point and Outliers — have sold millions. Now the Canadian writer and pop sociologist has been named the world's second most influential management thinker by the London Business School. Expect more kudos (and cash) when his new book What The Dog Saw – a collection of his New Yorker essays — hits bookstores next week.

2 Where The Wild Things Are

FILM Despite being adapted from a 338-word bedtime favourite, Spike Jonze's version of the Maurice Sendak tale may be the most high-concept foray ever into the kiddie movie genre. We don't how much fun it will actually be for your children but if they have any hipster aspirations, this is a good place to start.

3 Whatever Works



DVD Guess what? The neurotic curmudgeon in the Woody Allen comedy is not Woody Allen. It's Larry David. As you'd expect, the man behind Curb Your Enthusiasm and Seinfeld makes sarcasm and surly behaviour sing in this lightweight but amusing affair. Patricia Clarkson and Evan Rachel Wood, playing feisty Southern belles, get their own share of laughs.

4 Carey Mulligan

ACTRESS If the name doesn't ring a bell, don't worry. You'll hear plenty about this British actress once her film An Education hits theatres this fall. The 24-year-old has been on Oscar watchers' short list for a best-actress slot since the Nick Hornby-penned drama premiered at January's Sundance Film Festival.

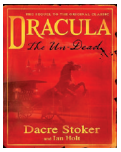
6 Dracula: The Un-Dead/Dacre Stoker



BOOK The king of the bloodsucker set is haunting bookstores just in time for Halloween in Dracula: The Un-Dead, a sequel to Bram Stoker's 1897 classic. The new tale, set 25 years after the original, has some extra bite to it as it springs from the same bloodline as Stoker, being co-authored by Dacre Stoker, Bram's Montreal-born great-grandnephew.

7 Embryonic: The Flaming Lips

ALBUM Now that they can sell out arenas, the masters of confetti-rock are back to quirky territory. Their latest release takes a left-turn from the populism of Yoshimi Battles The Pink Robots, landing straight on to the scuzzy psychedelia of their '90s output. Despite being 70 minutes long, there's plenty in this double album to keep listeners riveted.

Costumes key at Cirque du Soleil

EMMA YARDLEY
for Metro Canada

Even with 120 insect-inspired costumes to chose from, Steve Armstrong, the Head of Wardrobe for OVO, the Cirque du Soleil show currently playing in Toronto, doesn't hesitate when asked to name his favourite.

"I'll tell you, even though it's the one we worked the most on, it would be the crickets," says Armstrong, 32, perched in an office chair pulling a needle and thread through layers of bright green fabric. "It's not because of the colour or anything but the actual conception of the thing."

The costumes themselves are a brilliant triumph of teamwork, artistry and engineering, crafted out of stainless steel, ball joints, plane-grade aluminum, bolts, neoprene, foam, Lycra, nylon and Mytex, a shiny material used to make downhill skiers' unitards aero-dynamic.

The first prototype took 75 hours to construct but it took two months of on-stage trials before coming up with the final design that would withstand the continual tumbling and jumping required by the 10 trampolining cricket characters that wear them in every show.

"The trampolines were damaging to the costumes. The actual structure didn't work. But we got lucky enough to have one of the trampolinists who was also an engineer," says Armstrong, who originally trained in high fashion in Montreal and has been working with the costumes department for 11 years. "So, I said 'I'm thinking of doing it like this', and he'd say 'This is going to break at under pressure.' It was fun to involve an artist in developing something they'll be working in."

All the costumes worn by the 53 performing artists are made to each person's specific measurements at the Cirque's head office in Montreal and are maintained by Armstrong's six-person team in their small workshop in the main tent.

And keep in mind, crickets aren't the only things at OVO that are green:

- They use 100 per cent biodegradable detergent to wash the 100 to 250 costumes every day.
- Once the show ends, one full set of each costume is archived and the rest are sent to recycling factories where they are reused in a number of different products, including carpeting.
- The vast majority of fabrics used are from Ontario and Quebec.
- Armstrong's team uses pedal-powered sewing machines on location for leather repairs; these machines allow them more control over the needle while saving energy.

- OVO is playing until Nov. 8, 2009, under the Grand Chapiteau, at the Port Lands on Cherry Street.

Weighing-in on Diabetes with Dr. Patrick Yau

Dr. Patrick Yau
MD, FRCSC
General & Bariatric Surgeon
Slimband® Centre

Diabetes is a medical condition resulting in abnormally high blood sugar levels. Common symptoms of diabetes include: fatigue, increased urination, unquenchable thirst and unexplained weight loss. However, it is also possible for a patient to have diabetes and not show any of those symptoms. The diagnosis is made with a simple blood test showing an elevated blood sugar level. If left uncontrolled diabetes can lead to blindness, stroke, hardening of the arteries or atherosclerosis, and heart disease.

Generally doctors classify diabetes into one of two types;

Type I Diabetes means that the body cannot produce enough insulin because the cells that secrete it are damaged or non-existent. These patients require insulin to survive and there is no method to prevent this form of diabetes.

Type 2 Diabetes is the more common form of diabetes where the body does not use the insulin properly. It has been suggested by studies that over 2 million Canadians suffer from Type 2 Diabetes. Risk factors for this type include being obese, over forty years of age, having high blood pressure or a family history of the disease. Unlike Type 1 Diabetes however, there are treatments available that can control or even cure patients of this illness.

Type 2 Diabetes is strongly associated with obesity although the link is not completely understood. The belief is that obesity leads to insulin resistance in the tissues. Normally the body's insulin levels rise in response to elevated blood sugar levels, this signals the cells to absorb more insulin causing blood sugar levels to drop. For patients with Type 2 Diabetes the first line of treatment is usually medication that increases the amount of insulin secreted to stimulate the cell uptake of sugar from the blood. The good news is that treatment of obesity can lead to better control of the blood sugar levels and in some cases cure patients of this illness completely.

There are many treatments for obesity ranging from nutritional and activity lifestyle changes to weight loss surgeries such as laparoscopic adjustable gastric banding. It is important to stress that the weight loss has to be lifelong, otherwise diabetes can recur. In fact the typical pattern of yo-yo dieting can, in some cases, be more detrimental for people with Type 2 Diabetes. Adjustable laparoscopic gastric banding has been shown over the long term to be a better solution for obesity and in turn as a treatment for Type 2 Diabetes. In medical trials, gastric banding has been shown to cure or improve up to 80% of patients with Type 2 Diabetes. In fact, one of the most common reasons for doctor/patient referrals to weight loss surgery is related to the high success rates the gastric banding procedure has in treating Type 2 Diabetes.

Profile

Dr. Patrick Yau, MD, FRCS(C), General and Bariatric Surgeon, is Canada's leading specialist in advanced laparoscopic surgery and is the Medical Director at Slimband®. Opera meets water puppetry

JOHN KEILLOR
for Metro Canada

Up for something different? Director Robert Lepage's staging of Nightingale & Other Fables with the Canadian Opera Company is a sort of postmodern cabaret.

It combines several of Igor Stravinsky's mini-operas with Kabuki theatre and Vietnamese water puppetry. This show will be an equally unique experience for hardened opera veterans and first-time listeners.

The conductor's got extra duties. "The singers are taking cues off monitors, watching me on a screen but I can't see them. They're in the (orchestra) pit and I'm facing the musicians and chorus on stage," explains podium master Jonathan Darlington by phone.

He's making his own COC debut with this performance. "This is very precise music, and in such an atmospheric production the conducting challenge is enormous."

The puppets are manipulated by opera singers in the orchestra pit that's flooded with water. A stream of changing chamber orchestras plays on stage. There are six vocal soloists cast (including local bass favorite Robert Pomakov) and a hundred puppets, designed by American Michael Curry, who has already worked for Cirque du Soleil, Disney, and the Royal National Theatre.

"The singers are the puppeteers so I'm not the only performer who's being pushed hard," says Darlington. "It takes 25 years to learn how to be a puppetmaster, and these singers have to do it in 25 days."

Part of enjoying this production will be seeing how well the singers adapt to puppetry. Theatre's appeal is in stagecraft and seeing how well performers absorb skills. Opera singers are called upon to do things like fence on stage, and great stagecraft can lift up a whole production. This show's mix of risks and rarities will definitely be a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

"So much of this music by Stravinsky is simply never performed," says Darlington, "many lifelong listeners have never seen Nightingale or The Fox actually staged. That's also true for the other little pieces on this program. For people who are new to opera, this production won't be what they expect. For die-hard opera fans, this will be new."

Great authors' minds meet at fest

JOHN KEILLOR
for Metro Canada

Step by step, all cultural organizations work toward being the best.

Toronto's International Festival of Authors at Harbourfront Centre celebrates its 30th anniversary with nearly 150 writers in attendance. It's now the largest North American book event as this festival becomes a critical destination for literature lovers. Being the best means collaborating with the most important book events worldwide.

"We try and do it better each year," says festival director Geoffrey Taylor. "This year has a focus on writers from Scotland, 2009 being the 250th anniversary of Robbie Burns' birth. We've partnered with the Edinburgh International Book Festival, which is currently the biggest book event in the world."

This year's list of scribes includes many writers of Scottish descent, like former Talking Heads singer David Byrne and Canadian storyteller Alistair MacLeod. And while the event is proudly global, it's also entrenching itself within our own national literary establishment.

"We're partnering with the Giller Prize, the Writers Trust, and the Governor General's Awards," says Taylor proudly. "Those top three literary prizes in Canada, and the shortlisted books on each list will be presented at the festival."

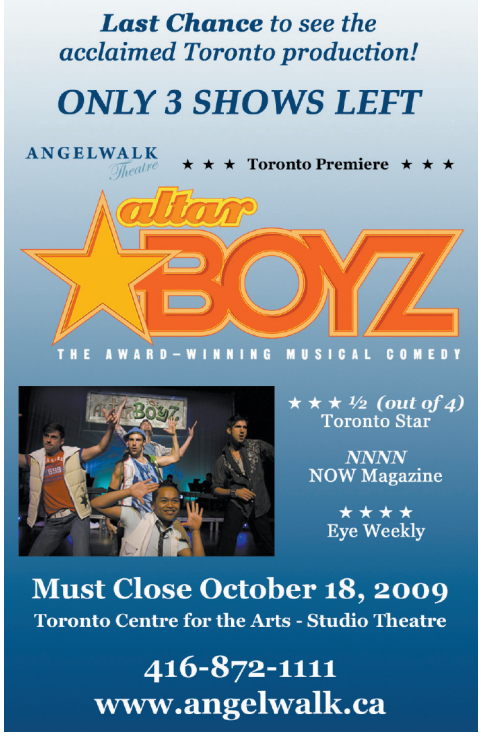
It's an event driven by stratospheric ambitions, but organizers also take care to support local talent, too. "Well it's a great opportunity to have people find out about your book and your work," says Torontonian Hal Niedzviecki, author of The Peep Diaries. "In my case we're doing a whole event themed around the idea of peep culture — the spying, the watching, the gossip gone global. So in terms of getting people excited about my book and ideas, it doesn't get much better than that."

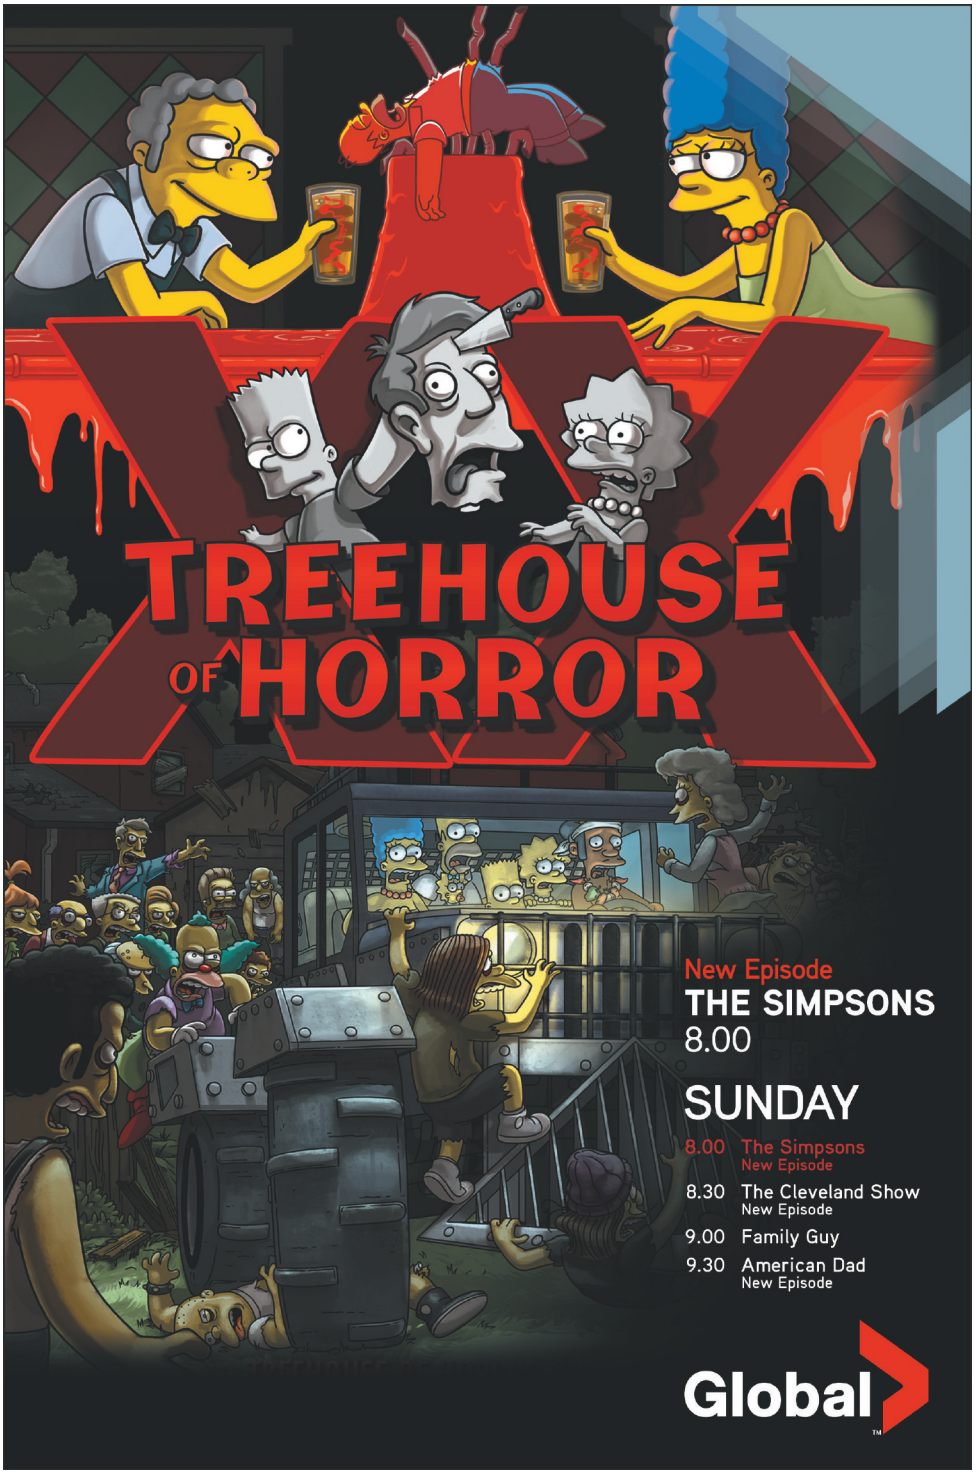
Hal Niedzviecki

IFOA is where the literati and the curious can hear great writers read and debate the future of books and culture. After 29 years, Taylor's festival is more relevant now than ever.

Authors

• This year's IFOA features the finest established Canuck novelists (Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro) with Scottish favorites (Ian Rankin, Alan Bissett) and authoring musicians (Anne Murray, Paul Quarrington). The range of skills in attendance boggles, including experimental stylists like Nicholson Baker, culture analysts like Mark Kingwell, politicos like Michael Ignatieff, and canonic Dickensians like John Irving. Any event where a Grand Old Author like Irving is rubbing shoulders with hip young talent like Miriam Toews is where the most authentic writerly dialogues can be found. The panel discussions should prove to be as lively as the readings will be absorbing.





CONSIDERING
Cosmetic Plastic Surgery?

Did you know in Canada any doctor with a license to practice medicine can practice 'cosmetic surgery'. This means a doctor with little or no surgical training can call themselves a 'cosmetic surgeon' and perform invasive procedures like liposuction or breast augmentation.

Only a PLASTIC SURGEON receives formal plastic surgery training of the entire body and is certified in plastic surgery.

Black Eyed Peas singer brings aid, plays benefit concert in Philippines

Black Eyed Peas singer apl.de.ap has flown to his native Philippines following devastating back-to-back storms to perform a benefit concert and deliver much-needed aid.

GETTY IMAGES

Apl planned to stage the concert Thursday evening in Manila during a brief trip to the country.

"I just want to tell everybody that my heart goes out to you guys and I will try my best to help out," he told reporters ahead of the event.

A Los Angeles resident whose real name is Allan Pineda Lindo, apl said he was concerned when he saw television footage of the devastation and decided to make a brief visit.

The worst flooding in 40 years struck the rice-growing northern Philippines and the capital Manila late last month when a typhoon after a storm dumped heavy rains that triggered landslides and inundated towns, killing 712 people and affecting more than 7 million.

In addition to a concert with local artists, apl brought canned goods from California, donated cash and appealed for more money for victims from around the world.

The hip-hop singer, who was adopted at 14 and moved to the United States, said he remains proud of his roots.

Even before his storm outreach, apl was involved in projects in his native country.

He recently performed in a music video, created in partnership with the Philippine Department of Tourism and MTV Asia, singing a new rap song, Take U to the Philippines, which features the country's white sand beaches, mountains and bustling cities.

"I love our culture, and you know I wanna share that all over the world," he said. "I'm not ashamed of who I am, I'm very proud to be Filipino."THE CANADIAN PRESS

Clooney laments media

Star questions the accuracy of today's news reporting

George Clooney thinks something has gone wrong when the media prints celebrity rumour and innuendo as fact.

The star, a journalist's son, said a news story used to require "two reliable sources, and that doesn't seem to exist as much anymore."

Clooney spoke Thursday at the London Film Festival, where one documentary in the lineup reveals how easily some newspapers can be duped into running fake stories about the famous.

The makers of Starsuckers fed false tips to British tabloids and then watched as some, though not all, ran them as legitimate news. The hoaxes included a story about Amy Winehouse's trademark beehive hairdo catching fire.

Starsuckers director Chris Atkins said he "wanted to answer one simple question ... How far will tabloid journalists go in the pursuit of their stories?"

Clooney, no stranger to intense media attention, said he has sympathy for journalists as newspaper staffs shrink and online competition for scoops grows. But he says accurate reporting has suffered.

"The problem is that there's so little reporting any more ... Somebody will write a story and it will be in 1,800 different outlets from one person's story," Clooney told reporters during a news conference to promote The Men Who Stare at Goats, a comedy about the U.S. military's experiments with "psychic warfare."

Clooney said he understood the pressures journalists face. "I'm the son of a newsman, I grew up around news," said Clooney, whose father is news anchor Nick Clooney. "You're going to have to sell papers. I get it."

But Clooney also said false stories leave celebrities with "no recourse."

"They're just reprinting and reprinting things that aren't necessarily true.

"I understand the problem with it, I understand why it happens. But it certainly is an issue."

"The problem is that there's so little reporting any more."

You don't need braaaaains to join the zombie walk

KAREN BLISS
for Metro Canada

This Saturday is about the only time screaming and running in the other direction is not necessary if you happen to come across thousands of people covered in blood, some with sharp instruments lodged in their head and body. Fear not, it's the 7th Annual Toronto Zombie Walk, a movement that has spread globally.

"I hate how they confine all the zombies to the sidewalk. Zombies don't walk on sidewalks!" bemoans founder and organizer Thea Munster with a laugh.

But try explaining that to our men in blue when an estimated 3,000 people show up to The Pit in Trinity Bellwoods Park (bordered by Queen St. W. and Dundas St. W) at 3:30 p.m. all ghouled out in fake blood and other zombie accoutrements, and embark on a walk through the city that ends at Bathurst and Bloor, a.k.a. The Dead End.

"I guess it stops traffic," Munster admits. "The police have been pretty good. They let me get up to the third or fourth Walk where we were getting 600 people, and then they said, 'We've got to work together on this.' Last year, with 3,000 zombies, the walk took like five hours because everyone had to stay on the friggin' sidewalk. I guess it will be the same this year."

There was also a little matter last year of some unruly brainless zombies thinking it was a good idea to bust into a funeral home — and there were three ceremonies going on. "I had to put out a big apology," says Munster. "So that was not good. We're not allowed to go by a funeral home again."

A zombie walker

For the most part, though, The Toronto Zombie Walk is harmless fun. Halloween supplier Creeped Out provides free fake blood for those who don't keep a vat at home and you can get splattered by volunteers right before the walk begins. And Resident Evil: The Dark Side Chronicles is setting up a makeup tent at noon — get there early.

Munster says people from all walks of death are welcome to walk, even zombie spawn. "I'd say we get about 50 kids between the ages of 5 and 8, and some in strollers as well. It's incredible. It's definitely a family event."

Wine tours under the desert sun

As unlikely as it seems, vineyards are thriving in Arizona

Grapes aren't supposed to grow in the desert. But in the southern Arizona town of Elgin, surrounded by endless, rolling green and amber hills, the Callaghan family is de-stemming gigantic bins of grapes that will eventually produce a nice Petit Verdot.

MATT YORK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Grapes await de-stemming at Callaghan's Vineyards in Elgin, Ariz.

As Kent Callaghan, the patriarch and proprietor, tinkers with his forklift in the hot sun, one of his workers, Megan Haller, sifts through bunches of grapes.

"You can actually have some excellent wines out of Arizona. It can be done," said Haller, who works at Callaghan Vineyards while taking winemaking classes.

The 10-hectare vineyard was one of three in Sonoita-Elgin, a rural area an hour's drive from Tucson, when Callaghan's parents started it in 1990.

In the last decade, six other vineyards have moved in. Similar growth has also occurred in northern Arizona as more aspiring winemakers saw that the time was right and land was ripe for the taking. The ensuing clusters of vineyards have created a wine drinker's treasure map that has gone unnoticed by many — even Arizonans.

Talking with tourists who are surprised at the availability and quality of Arizona wine is almost a daily routine for vineyard owners.

"It happens all the time, especially among people that know wine well. People really into wine are totally off the beaten path here," Callaghan said.

Besides Sonoita-Elgin, Arizona wineries have flourished south of Sedona in the Verde Valley, situated along the Verde River, and around the southeastern city of Willcox. All three areas are nestled at elevation levels between 1,200 and 1,500 metres. The location leads to cooler summers and low evening temperatures. "That's what the grapes really thrive in. It thickens their skin. It contributes more flavour to the wine," said Rhonni Boss-Moffitt, publisher of Arizona Vines and Wines magazine.

According to Boss-Moffitt, there are 39 licensed wineries across the state.

There is a competitive but also neighbourly spirit among the wineries — most of which are boutique, family-run businesses. At an Arizona winery, a visitor has a good chance of actually being served by the winemaker.

That atmosphere is what drew Tim Mueller and his wife, Joan, to open Canelo Hills Winery next door to Callaghan in 2005. Transplants from Rhode Island, they thought Sonoita-Elgin was reminiscent of what Napa, Calif., was 35 years ago. "Back then, there were a lot of small family-owned wineries. It wasn't a corporate liquor industry like it is now," said Mueller, who also practices psychiatry in Tucson. "You'd walk in, meet the people making the wine, and you could look out the back door and see the people making harvest." Between tourists and snowbirds — those who only spend autumn and winter in Arizona — a majority of tasting rooms see the most foot traffic October thru April.

Navigating niche-market hotel finders

Check out what's available at these lesser-known sites

Go online to book a hotel room, and you'll be bombarded by options from Las Vegas to Laos, in no particular order.

There's also a constellation of hotel-sorting websites to help travellers find their way to the deals. Some of these businesses, such as Expedia, Priceline, and TripAdvisor, have been around for years.

But other, less well-known sites can also steer you toward exceptional hotel deals or experiences. Some specialize in boutique hotels; others offer unusual amenities such as eBay-like auctions for hotel rooms or even surprise vacations. Here's a sampling of some providers that have found a niche in this crowded market.

Priceline's Hotel Price Maps

Priceline, famous for the service that lets its users bid for hotel rooms online, has launched a handy new mapping service that has hotels popping up in major cities all around the globe, listed by price. Let's say you need a place to stay on Puerto Vallarta's Banderas Bay. Using Priceline's price map, you can quickly narrow down the 58 hotels on Priceline's city map to ones that fit your price and rating. Priceline says its site includes hotel maps in thousands of cities.

Jetsetter

This luxury-loving, members-only Web tool launched just this month with feature stories on a few top-of-the-line hotel experiences. Jetsetter sends staff to almost all the resorts it recommends to write first-hand reports. Then it runs two-day sales.

"We're constantly bringing in new opportunities and new offers," said CEO and founder Drew Patterson. "If you see something today and you like it, great, you can buy it. Tomorrow there will be a new set of offers." Mesmerizing photography makes the website an exciting destination on its own.

• jetsetter.com/sales

Hotwire

Do you just want to get away — and it doesn't much matter where? Hotwire offers a "today's top deal" that could land you in Portland, Ore., or London. The site is all about saving money, and includes a nifty hotel-themed graphic showing just how Hotwire's prices measure up to those of Orbitz and Priceline.

• hotwire.com

Get a Room

Get a Room, which describes itself as a partner with Travelocity, also places a premium on price, promising to "unlock the lowest rates on the Web." And it gives users the option of booking the hotel through a toll-free number, 800-468-3578. A helpful person answers promptly.

• getaroom.com

Sherman Meter

The Sherman Meter tabulates hotel reviews from around the globe and produces a score that helps you find the best balcony view in Copenhagen or spa in Barbados. Travelling around Sherman Meter's busy Web site is a journey in itself. ShermansTravel.com also uses its own reviewers to supplement the writing it gleans from other publications.

• Click on Hotel Reviews at shermanstravel.com

Luxury Link

As the name suggests, the 13-year-old Luxury Link focuses on premium travel experiences. The site auctions off its travel packages and helps the winning bidder with travel bookings. It also offers no-auction purchase plans. Perhaps its most unusual feature: mystery vacations. The destination isn't revealed until the package is sold — generally at about 50 per cent of its retail value, said site co-founder Diane McDavitt. Mystery vacation bidders do see hints about the destination through the course of the auction, said McDavitt.

"It's meant to be entertaining and fun, and at the end of the day the lucky winner ends up with a terrific package," she said.

Jen & John back on?

ON AGAIN OFF AGAIN It's not the first time Jennifer Aniston and John Mayer have reunited after a split, but the couple are simply "enjoying their friendship," says a source close to the singer. "They've been talking for a while — they're very friendly." Adds another source, "They've remained close," people.com reports.

The duo recently spent a night together late last month at New York City's Bowery Hotel. "Jen was there on the arm of John and they were all very lovey," says an onlooker. "She was in casual clothing as was he, and she seemed very comfortable around his crowd of friends."

Aniston, 40, and Mayer, 31, first called it quits in August 2008, only to reunite months later for a short time — and then split once again in March after a very public appearance together at the Oscars.

At the time of their most recent split, a source told People, "Jen got her feelings very hurt and she is done with John for good. They have no contact for now." Reps could not be reached for comment.

Simpson gets apology

A NOT-SO-FUNNY FOUL Call it a definite foul, people.com reports.

After a less-than-sensitive cartoon commercial that mercilessly mocked Jessica Simpson during FOX's NFL Sunday last week, the network and Burger King apologized for the ad.

"Burger King did not have any editorial input in the creation of the animation that ran last Sunday, and no one from Burger King Corp., approved it before it aired," FOX said in a statement. "Upon reflection, our poor attempt at humor was insensitive, and we deeply apologize to anyone who might have been offended."

In the commercial, cartoon versions of the Cowboys ribbed ex-boyfriend Tony Romo for dating her, skewered Simpson, 29, and for her weight gain after their breakup.

"Man, I still can't believe Tony dated Jessica Simpson, even after she blew up bigger than Flozell Adams!" Marion Barber said. "Unlike Tony, at least Jessica comes up big when it counts," Jason Witten responded.

And the cartoon version of coach Wade Phillips adds, "Say Tony, is Jessica around? We could use a defensive tackle!" Romo was not available for comment.

Khloe laughs at tabloid news

I DIDN'T DO THAT! Khloe Kardashian says she had a good laugh when she picked up the new issue of Star, which claimed she and Los Angeles Laker Lamar Odom had already split because he refused to give her a massage, us-magazine.com reports.

"I seriously died when I read that! LOL," she writes on her blog. "Star is known for doing evil, fake and RIDICULOUS stories about my family. Remember the cover story, Kardashians At War? Honey, please," she added.

She said Star is "becoming the Enquirer. Next thing you know they'll be saying that Kourtney is giving birth to a cat! LOL. All of their stories are absurd but at least we get a good laugh from their lies."

For the record, Khloe, 25, says married life is "incredible and I've never been so happy. I feel so blessed to have Lamar and I can't wait to spend my life with him"

Lewis cancels tour after attack

MAN ARRESTED British singer Leona Lewis was forced to cancel a promotional trip to Germany after being attacked at a book signing in London, her spokesman tells AFP.

"Leona is obviously shocked after yesterday but is OK," the spokesman says, referring to the incident Wednesday when "a guy came up and punched her to the side of the head."

The assailant didn't appear to say anything to Lewis, and the attack appeared unprovoked. Security quickly intervened, and the man was arrested.
